Foreword .................................................................................................................. 1
Editorial ..................................................................................................................... 2
Synopsis of Articles ................................................................................................. 3
Summary of Conclusions .......................................................................................... 3
Some Further Links between Francis Bacon and Don Quixote
by John S. Alabaster ................................................................................................. 5
John Heywood as a Probable Source for Francis Bacon
by John S. Alabaster ................................................................................................. 42
An Analysis of the Latin Entries in Bacon’s Promus
by John S. Alabaster ................................................................................................. 55
English Translations of the Latin Entries in Bacon’s Promus by Philip Bartholomew .............................................................................................. 98
Correspondence ....................................................................................................... 176

© Published periodically by THE FRANCIS BACON SOCIETY INCORPORATED at Canonbury Tower, Islington, London N1 2NQ, and printed by Woolnough Bookbinding Ltd., Irthlingborough, Northants NN9 5SE

ISSN 0961-2173
Off
£
Q
"
J
°
N
D. c Z o k v ^y u
**■
3
_/?<?"
ZJ3.
M /Y \r o
o
o
o k
£&
7^ 18 x
217
75 80
<£&
108
7^ 207 x
254
ZL_\ 308
x 308 x 318 l 319 x 327 x 207 x
242

Facsimile of Folio 85 of Bacon's Promus of Formularies taken from pp 190-191 of Durning-Lawrence (1910)
(The transcription made by Durning Lawrence is shown inside the back cover)
FOREWORD

Baconiana as you know is published periodically by The Society. Your Council recently reviewed this long established policy in the light of responses of members to last year's questionnaire, and has decided that, whenever possible, it will increase the number of issues to be made to members annually.

This must of course depend, ultimately, on the submission to the Editor of available articles considered suitable for publication, and future contributions, as usual, will be greatly appreciated.

With a view to implementing our new policy, this particular edition is supplementary to the usual issues of Baconiana, and has arisen through an accumulation of material about the relation between Don Quixote and the Promus of Francis Bacon, which has recently been researched by one of our Council members: Dr. John S. Alabaster.

In view of the nature of the subject matter surrounding the authorship of Don Quixote, to which there have been many references in past issues of Baconiana, it was decided that this would best be dealt with as a whole, so that it could "stand up in it's own right" so to speak, and that the author, Dr. Alabaster, should be invited to act as Editor of the material presented, which he has kindly agreed to do.

Peter Welsford, Chairman-designate, for the Council of the Francis Bacon Society, March, 1999
Following Francis Carr’s recent initiatives in discussing the possible authorship of Don Quixote (his article on ‘Cervantes, England and Don Quixote’ in 1995 in Baconiana No. 193; his talk to the Society on ‘English Characters in Don Quixote’ on 10 July and again on 7 November, 1996; and his book, ‘Who Wrote Don Quixote’ which I was kindly shown in draft), some detailed analyses have been carried out to investigate further the authorship question.

The results of an analysis of word-length frequency of the sonnets in Don Quixote and those by Shakespeare have already been described briefly in Baconiana No. 194 (1997), whilst some of the main results of later work have been presented to meetings of the Society: on 9 April, 1997 (on matches between the entries in the Promus in English and Spanish and the text of Don Quixote and on some ciphers) and on 8 April, 1998 (on John Heywood as a source of some of the English proverbs, with mention of more ciphers as well as matches in Latin). Since then the work has been written up in more detail and a study has been made of the Latin and French entries in the Promus.

In presenting material for publication, it has been felt important to support the articles with detailed tables, figures and appendices, so that the critical reader can test for himself the validity of the conclusions drawn. But since this results in quite lengthy articles which are rather different from the usual contribution, and since they all relate to Don Quixote, it has been agreed by the Council to group them into a single extra issue of Baconiana. Furthermore, as an essential part of the work, all the Latin entries in the Promus have been translated and many of the sources identified by a colleague, Philip Bartholomew and, although only a proportion of these have a bearing on Don Quixote, all the translations are included in the present publication because it is felt that they are of considerable intrinsic interest.

The synopsis of the articles given overleaf is included to help the reader select items of particular interest.
1. Some Further Links between Francis Bacon and Don Quixote

Part I deals with some ciphers found in Don Quixote, listing all the occurrences of the different forms of Cid Hamet Benengeli and all the quotations that can be construed as indicating the number 33, which is a cipher for 'Bacon' where A=1, B=2, C=3, etc. The totals of each of these two ciphers themselves can even be construed to total 33.

Part II expands the list of matches that have been found between the entries in English and Spanish in the Promus of Bacon and the text of Don Quixote. The subject matter of these matches is also briefly discussed.

2. John Heywood as a probable source for Francis Bacon

An examination has been made of the choice and sequence of entries of English proverbs common to the collections in Heywood and in Bacon's Promus and to the entries in Don Quixote. Full details are given in an Appendix, together with reference numbers to enable the reader to explore further the origins and usages of these proverbs.

3. An Analysis of the Latin Entries in Bacon's Promus

The translations of the Latin entries, by Philip Bartholomew are given in an Appendix, together with all assigned sources. The sequences of entries in the Promus and in the original works are compared in order to identify those most likely to have been taken from primary, rather than secondary sources. Matches have been sought between the Latin entries or their translations, and the English text of Don Quixote (including Latin quotations). As an example the coverage of the law and the administration of justice in the Promus and in Don Quixote are described. The use of entries to confirm the pagination of the Promus is also discussed.

SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS

For those not wishing to study all the detail, the main results may be summarised as follows:

1. There is a large number of matches between the entries in Bacon's
Promus in English, Spanish and Latin and with the English text of Don Quixote; this suggests a common origin for these two works.

2. There is very strong evidence that Bacon copied into his Promus some of the English proverbs in John Heywood’s collections, his choice corresponding closely with that found in Don Quixote; this again indicates a common origin for the two works.

3. There are many examples in the English text of Don Quixote of the 33-cipher (indicating ‘BACON’ where A=1, B=2, etc.); these can be derived from the numbers mentioned in the text (relating to weights, measures, ages, counts, etc.) and the frequency of the different forms of the name, Cid Hamet Benengeli.

4. The conclusion from the evidence presented is that Bacon was probably closely involved in the production of the English text of Don Quixote.

5. The Latin entries in the Promus are dominated by extracts from the Adages of Erasmus, but many classical authors are also quoted.

John S. Alabaster
Acting Editor for this Issue. March, 1999
SOME FURTHER LINKS BETWEEN FRANCIS BACON AND DON QUIXOTE

SOME FURTHER LINKS BETWEEN FRANCIS BACON AND DON QUIXOTE

by

John S. Alabaster

Francis Carr \cite{1, 2} has already collected and discussed a considerable number of connections between Francis Bacon and Miguel Cervantes’ Don Quixote. These include several ciphers in Don Quixote and a number of similarities in wording between Bacon’s ‘Promus [or ‘larder’] of Fourmes and Elegancies’ and the text of Don Quixote. Both these subjects are explored further here.

PART 1. SOME CIPHERS IN DON QUIXOTE

One of the ciphers Carr found is the name of the person described as having translated the story of Don Quixote from Arabic into Spanish – Cid Hamet Benengeli – whose name Carr suggests can be translated as Lord Bacon son of England. He reported that this name occurs 33 times in the 1620 edition of Don Quixote which he used \cite{3}, a number that is of interest because it can be derived from the name, Bacon, by assigning numerical values to the letters according to the simple scheme: A=1, B=2, C=3, etc. Carr \cite{1} also pointed out that the number 33 is twice put into the text quite unnecessarily when Sancho Panza has to agree to suffer 3,300 lashes for which he would be paid 825 reals, which would amount to 3,300 pieces of blanks. Two other examples of a numerical cipher are also evident in Carr’s example. Firstly, that the number 825 could be construed as $8 + 25 = 33$ and secondly, that the number 100 is to be found in both ‘eight hundred and twenty-five’ and ‘thirty-three hundred’, a number that can also be obtained from the name Francis Bacon, using the simple numerical cipher already mentioned — Francis (=67) + Bacon (=33) = 100.

This part of the present study aims to check on the occurrences in Don Quixote of, not only the ‘Cid’ name in its various forms, but also of the 33- and 100-ciphers, using the 1620 edition that was reprinted in 1900.
BACONIANA

(4), which differs somewhat from the one used by Carr (3), but is the earliest edition that is easily obtainable. The results are shown in Tables 1 & 2, respectively.

Cid Hamet Benengeli

Table 1. Occurrences of the name Cid Hamet Benengeli and its variants

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Vol.</th>
<th>Book</th>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Name</th>
<th>No.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Cid Hamete Benengeli</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>Book 2</td>
<td>p.58</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>Book 3</td>
<td>p.101</td>
<td>Cid Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.112</td>
<td>Cid Mahamet Benengeli</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.171</td>
<td>Cid Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.252</td>
<td>Cid Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Vol. II Part 2</td>
<td>p.189</td>
<td>Cid Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.203</td>
<td>Cid Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.204</td>
<td>Cid Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.205</td>
<td>Cid Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>*p.235</td>
<td>Cid Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.235</td>
<td>Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.351</td>
<td>Cid Hamet Benengeli</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Vol. III</td>
<td>p.9</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.16</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.62</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.82</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.91</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.117</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.122</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.147</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.150</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.166</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.183</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.191</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>p.197</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

6
The 33-Cipher

The '33-cipher' is in no way so readily found as is the name Cid Hamet Benengeli and its variants. There is, therefore, a danger both of missing it when present, as well as apparently finding it when absent, so that any final count could be the result of self-cancelling errors! The reader must judge. The possible examples that have been found to date are listed in Table 2.

Table 2.

Quotations construed as examples of the '33-Cipher'

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Vol.</th>
<th>page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>I</td>
<td>64</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td></td>
<td>108</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
<td>130</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td></td>
<td>151</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td></td>
<td>222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td></td>
<td>227</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td></td>
<td>227</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Cipher text with interpretation and comments in square brackets, ‘[ ]’

1. With less than 3 reals . . . a man may make three gallons of it [3 & 3 = 33]
2. breathing thirty sobs and threescore sighs [30 + 3 = 33]
3. in an azure field three crowns of silver . . . lord of the three Arabias [3 & 3 = 33]
4. The fisherman . . . carried over one goat . . . passed over another . . . and passed over another [=3]. Keep you, sir, good account of the goats that the fisherman ferries over; for if one only be forgotten, the tale will end, and it will not be possible to tell one word more of it . . . he [the fisherman] turned for another goat, and another, and another [= 3 more: 3 & 3 = 33]
5. It [Don Quixote’s tablet/letter] needs no seal . . . but only my rubric, which is as valuable as if it were subscribed not only for three asses, but also for three hundred [33 & 100]
6. [two stanzas of a poem]

and a third stanza, each of ten lines (= 30) and each with the addition of Toboso (+ 3 = 33)] if . . . he did not also add that of Toboso, the rime could not be understood

7. He [Don Quixote] entertained himself all the time of Sancho his absence; who, had he stayed three weeks away [3], as he dip but three days [3], the Knight of the Ill-favoured Face should have remained so disfigured as the very mother that bore him would not have known him. [play on the word disfigured?; 3 & 3 = 33]
SOME FURTHER LINKS BETWEEN FRANCIS BACON AND DON QUIXOTE

8 280 Three being thus mounted . . . and the other three-on foot [33]
9 284 he would rather have given unto himself three blows [3] on the mouth, and also bit his tongue thrice [3], than have spoken any word whence it might result in your indignation [i.e. by being revealed; 3 & 3 = 33]
10 297 away little more than three days [3], Toboso being more than thirty [30] leagues from hence [3 + 30 = 33]
11 II 39 the three [parts] I will bestow upon you [sons]
40 and the third the war [3 & 3 = 33]
12 40 3000 ducets [3] apiece . . . take back again two thousand ducets of the three [3; 3 & 3 = 33]
13 61 barque holding thirty persons [= 3 & 10] or more . . . voyage of thirty leagues [= 3 & 10] distant from Algiers [= 33 & 100]
14 141 and that the players
142 got more by those three [3] alone [tragedies — written by a famous poet of our kingdom] than by thirty [30] of the best that were penned or acted since [3 + 30 = 33]

Numbering after p.235

1 249 he might see three country-wenches . . . upon three ass-colts’ [3 & 3 = 33]
2 268 I have three like three orient pearls [3 & 3 = 33]
3 347 [para 2, line 7:] three times
[line 8:] three days [3 & 3 = 33]
4 [line 12:] three nights
[line 13:] three days [3 & 3 = 33]
5 [line 21:] three days
[line 22:] three country wenches [3 & 3 = 33]
6 322 never a one [1] was under fourteen nor none above eighteen [1 + 14 + 18 = 33]
7 III 7 I think that two shillings [24 pence] and seven-pence halfpenny [6 pence & 3 half-pence] is little enough [24 + 6 + 3 = 33]
let him have half a crown [30 pence]. Let him have the full asking... we'll ne'er stand upon three half-pence more or less [30 + 3 = 33]

the whole prices of all were twenty-one shillings and eleven pence [21 & 11] ... Master Peter demanded over and above twelve pence [1 = 1 shilling] for his labour [21 + 11 + 1 = 33]

[last stanza of Poem:] Himself three thousand and three hundred give [3000 + 300 = 33 hundred = 33 & 100]

[para 1:] I say not three thousand, but I will as soon give myself three stabs as three [3 & 3 = 33]

[para 2, line 4:] say three thousand and three hundred [3300 = 33 & 100]

[para 2, line 6:] claw them off at three thousand and three hundred plucks [3300 = 33 & 100] but to make ado for three thousand and three hundred lashes [3300 = 33 & 100]

I am content to give myself three thousand and three hundred lashes [3300 = 33 & 100] with three thousand and three hundred lashes lacking five [3300 = 33 & 100]

as this Countess Three Skirts [sic], or Three Tails [sic]; for skirts and tails all is one [3 & 3 = 33]

Countess Trifaldin, whom Trifaldin with the White Beard led by the hand [3 & 3 = 33]

Her tail or train... had three corners, which was [sic] borne by three pages [3 & 3 = 33] with those three sharp corners... for which belike she was called the Countess Trifaldin as if we should say the Countess of the Three Trains [3 & 3 = 33] strangeness of the three-fold train, left her name Lobuna, and took that of Trifaldi [3 & 3 = 33] not transparent, as was Trifaldin's... Trifaldin still leading her by the hand [3 & 3 = 33]

Knight of the Three Stars, ended the adventure of the six hobgoblins [3 x 6 = 18] without naming his squire's person [Bacon?] that was present at all, as if he were not alive . . . and it may be when he comes back he will find the Lady Dulcinca’s business three-fold, nay, five-fold [3 x 5 = 15; 18 + 15 = 33] the three thousand and three hundred lashes [3300 = 33 & 100]

I should tell him if there were enough to make two [2] . . . my gallant went on adding more capouches and I answered with more yes-es, till we came to five [3, 4 & 5] . . . “but pray, sir, let him show his five [5] capouches that he hath made me” . . . taking his hand from under his cloak, he showed five capouches [5] in it, upon each finger one [4 x 1 = 4] and said, "Behold here the five [5] capouches that this man would have me make" [2+3+4+5+5+4+5 = 33] each fetlock [4] having nine-and-twenty pound of wool upon it [4 + 29 = 33] their ages seemed to be not under fifteen, nor past eighteen [15 + 18 = 33]

Three days and three nights was Don Quixote with Roque [3 & 3 = 33]

I think to get a thousand crowns [1000] by it . . . for there will be two thousand copies [2000] and they will vent at three [3] shillings apiece roundly [3 (thousand) & 3 = 33]

The whip-lashes... are in number three thousand three hundred and odd [3300 = 33 & 100] so they will amount to three thousand three hundred pieces of three blanks [3 x 0 = 0; 33 & 100] eight hundred and twenty-five ryals [8 + 25 = 33; 100 & 33]

Don Quixote . . . lost not one [1] stroke with misreckoning, and found that those of the foregoing night, joined onto these, were just the sum of three Frequency of the 33 examples of the 33-Cipher in Don Quixote (after page 235 of Vol. II) (FIG. 1)

Frequency of Ciphers in Don Quixote (FIG. 2)
Conclusion

The presence in Don Quixote of these three ciphers, all linked to the name. Bacon, supports the conclusion that Bacon was closely involved in the production of this work. This is particularly so because they all occur at increasing frequency as the tale of Don Quixote unfolds, and the first two each total 33 after page 235 of Volume II, when the tale apparently really begins.

The 100-Cipher

Altogether twelve examples of the 100-cipher have emerged, 10 of which occur after p.235 of Volume II.

Sources

The Promus used in the present work (which was in manuscript form until the end of the last century) is the reprint produced by Durning-Lawrence [5] which was carefully collated with the help of experts from the British Museum. The initial pages are missing, for it comprises folio 83 (front) to folio 133 (back) inclusive, two folios of which are dated; folio 85, front (Dec. 5, 1594) and folio 114, front (27 Jan. 1595 [1596, modern dating]). A number of the original folios are blank or virtually so; Durning-Lawrence’s modern pagination (193-286) is adopted hereafter. Altogether, there is a collection of over 1600 sayings, rhyming couplets, cryptic notes, puns, short dialogues and single words, mainly in Latin or English (85%), but including some French (12%), Spanish (2%), Italian and Greek, together with a few in mixed languages (Fig. 3). There is some duplication of texts and of translated meanings. It seems fairly obvious that, like the ‘trivial fond records’ that Hamlet had copied into his ‘table’ (Act I, scene v), such a collection was made as an aide mémoire for further use, for many of the entries are to be found in works published under Bacon’s name [6 & 7]. Others are marked off on the manuscript in one of several distinctive ways, the significance of which is not yet clear, but may be related to their later use by Bacon.
BACONIANA

Frequency of Entries in Bacon’s Promus

(FIG. 3)

![Bar graph showing frequency distribution of entries in Bacon’s Promus by language.]

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Language</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Latin</td>
<td>50%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>English</td>
<td>40%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>French</td>
<td>10%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spanish</td>
<td>10%</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Greek</td>
<td>0%</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
The text of Don Quixote used {4} is published in three volumes; Volume I contains the first three Books of Part I and the first seven chapters of Book IV (Book I is not explicitly titled); Volume II contains the remaining chapters of Book IV and the first 25 chapters of Part II; whilst Volume III contains the remaining chapters of Part II. The chapter numbering and pagination of these three volumes is adopted here, but the chapter numbers of the edition used by Carr {3} are also added in brackets { } for ease of reference where these differ from the edition used here.

Approach

The text of Don Quixote has been read three times, having the Promus entries in English (and the numerical cyphers) particularly in mind the second time, and the translated Spanish entries also in mind at the third reading. Since new matches were found at each reading, others doubtless remain to be discovered, and so the present analysis has to be regarded as tentative.

Unequivocal Matches Found

Of 650 entries in English in the Promus, 112 (17%) are to be found matched to a greater or lesser degree in the text of Don Quixote. Forty-eight of these have identical or near identical wording or meaning, a selection of 17 of the most unequivocal of which is given in Table 3.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Table 3:</th>
<th>Selection of the text of Don Quixote which is closely matched by entries in the Promus</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>One swallow makes not a summer</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Out of the frying pan into the fire</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Covetousness breaks the sack</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spurn against the prick</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>All is not gold that glisters</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Something is better than nothing</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The heart dreams not of what the eye sees not</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I know not where the shoe wrests me</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Between an anvil and a hammer</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Got the bridle betwixt his teeth</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When the head aches all the body is out of tune</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Further details of these and all other (less direct) matches found are given in Appendix I, including those (indicated by an asterisk) already notified by Carr \{1, 2\}; those of similar meaning have been grouped together, rather than being presented strictly in chronological order.

Indirect Matches

The remaining matches are less obvious since general ideas, rather than wording are often found to be in common, and in a few cases the connections are not apparent without reading several pages, sometimes well separated, in the whole book. For this second group the identification is necessarily much more subjective, and therefore much more open to question by the reader.

An example of an entry in the Promus for which the match is obscure is ‘Galens compositions not paracelsus separations’. Galens was noted for his herbal remedies, whilst Paracelsus (Philippus Theophrastic von Hohenheim) favoured chemical ones. The match is to be seen in the Balsam containing rosemary taken by Don Quixote in preference to the zinc ointment offered by Sancho Panza, but the connection is apparent only over nearly 60 pages of text. Another of such examples is: ‘few wordes need/ much may be said’. In this case the text leads to the expectation of a succinct speech, whereas the speakers concerned continue at considerable length.

Some matches are rather more cryptic. One of these, which is hinted at in the Preface and soon elaborated in the first chapter, is the Promus entry, ‘Cacus oxen forwards and backwards’. Cacus was a cattle thief who covered his tracks by pulling the animals backwards by the tail so leaving the impression that they had walked forwards towards, rather than away from home. For another, ‘Charon’s fares’, one part of the text refers not to Charon, the ferryman himself, but to a fisherman acting as a ferryman, whose curious ‘fares’ (goats) provide the basis of a cipher, as explained in Part I.

Also, if we accept at face value what is written on the penultimate
General Distribution

The entries in the Promus tend to be distributed in groups according to language and topic, which is consistent with Bacon having made conscious choices in writing the notes. (This matter is described further in the last paper in this Number of Bacontiana). Taking account of this uneven distribution by collecting sequential groups of 50 entries from those that are available in the Promus, the distribution of matched entries in Don Quixote (in English) shows a further markedly uneven utilisation (from 4% to 34%; average 17%) (Fig 5): this again would be consistent with Bacon having made conscious choices in their utilisation, rather than their being a random selection.

The uneven distribution of matches in the Promus can be illustrated in more detail by simply counting the total found on each page. This is shown in Fig. 6. Whilst there are 25 pages having only a single match in the Don Quixote (the right-hand side of the figure), there is a small number of pages with markedly more; for example, there are two pages with eight and nine matches, respectively and one with 13, the latter out of a total of 28 entries available.

Most (92%) of the entries that are matched in Don Quixote are listed before 27 January, 1595, well before any publication of Don Quixote.

The writer of Don Quixote tells us in the Preface that a friend opined, 'Thou mayest collect sentences and sayings to insert in thy history', and so it is not surprising that many of the matching entries are proverbs (Sancho Panza being particularly prone to spouting them). A number of these have their well-known modern equivalents in both English and Spanish, and many were well-known at the time, at least to scholars [7]. One such example is, 'All that glisters is not gold ...' which is known from Chaucer [9] and later authors [7]. However, in this particular case, the saying is immediately preceded in both the Promus and Don Quixote by another well-known saying 'The nearer the church, the further from God' — a notable coincidence.

There are two other examples of close proximity of two sayings in both documents. Firstly, on pages 239 and 240 of the Promus (9 lines apart) are:

1) Better to ride on a donkey that carries you than on a horse that throws you (in Spanish), and

2) Of suffrance cometh ease; their equivalents occur on page 107, Vol. I of Don Quixote, also 9 lines apart — another remarkable coincidence. Secondly, two items occur on

SOME FURTHER LINKS BETWEEN FRANCIS BACON AND DON QUIXOTE

Utilisation in Don Quixote of 650 English Entries in Bacon’s Promus (FIG. 5)

Distribution of Matches between Don Quixote and the Promus in English and Spanish, including duplicates (FIG. 6)
Frequency of Matches

Most of the matched entries occur only once in both the Promus and Don Quixote, but a small number (five) occur twice or more in both sources. The overall average occurrence for these five is 2.8 times and 3.8 times, respectively, in these two sources, the overall averages being 1.1 and 1.5 times respectfully (Fig. 7). So, the tendency for duplication in the Promus is reflected by a similar tendency in Don Quixote.

Matching Themes

The themes that are mentioned most often in both sources, include:—
1) the idea of doing service and good to others,
2) having the freedom to paint (i.e. to write) as one wants, and
3) distinguishing between good and evil (black and white). These two themes are all very Baconian. The two latter themes have a slightly greater emphasis in Don Quixote than in the Promus, as would be reasonable to expect in a complete book compared with jotted notes.

Other items repeated more in Don Quixote than in the Promus include (with their frequency in the former shown in brackets):—
4) differentiating between deeds and words (eight),
5) practising the mean way in all things (seven) — which brings to mind Pope’s often quoted, . . . think how Bacon shin’d. The wisest, brightest, meanest [i.e. most moderate] of mankind’ [10] and
6) observing events from the side-lines (six).

First Records of Proverbs

Of all the matches found (Appendix 1) about half (63) have also been found listed among a collection by Tilley [7] of nearly 12,000 proverbs published in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. For six of these, the earliest source reported is the Promus c. 1594; details of these with their later sources are given in Table 4. This is suggestive that Bacon was the Frequency of Repetition of Entries in the Promus
and Don Quixote

FIG. 7

First to collect and use them in later works, including Don Quixote, but it is not of itself proof, especially when it is clear that Tilley's volume is not without gaps; for example, not all sayings found by the present author in Don Quixote are recorded there.
Table 4.

Details of Promus entries (c. 1594), matched with Don Quixote and found elsewhere in later sources by Tilley {7}.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Entry (in order shown in Appendix 1)</th>
<th>Record No.</th>
<th>Dates of next records</th>
<th>Note</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>It is better to ride on a donkey that carries you than on a horse that throws you [in Spanish]</td>
<td>A361</td>
<td>1616</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Covetousness breakes the sacke</td>
<td>C744</td>
<td>1599</td>
<td>1611</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tell a lye to knowe a treuth [also in Spanish]</td>
<td>L237</td>
<td>1596 (1)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>if you are a knave in your town you will be a knave in Seville [in Spanish; it should be noted, however, that the similar ‘The dog in the manger’ is to be found in Erasmus’s Adagia and works of other authors in 1546, 1564 &amp; 1578]</td>
<td>K133</td>
<td>1600-1 (2)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The gardener’s dog neither eats nor lets his master eat [in Spanish]</td>
<td>D513</td>
<td>1622</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Satis quercus; enough of acornes</td>
<td>G38</td>
<td>1659</td>
<td>1666</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>A21</td>
<td>1597 (4)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Notes:

(1) Shakespeare, King John, Act III. i. 275.
(2) Shakespeare, Henry II. Act II. i. 64.
(3) Bacon. Advancement of Learning II. p.18. [refers to Spanish proverb and gives English translation]
(4) Bacon. Colours of Good and Evil.

It will be noticed that one of the sayings occurs later under the name of Shakespeare. Many more examples of Promus entries matching Shakespeare have been reported {6}, but such connections are not discussed further here.
Conclusions

There are several points to note in the relation between the Promus entries and the text of Don Quixote. These are:

(1) the high proportion of entries, especially those in Spanish, that match the text in Don Quixote;
(2) the more clumped distribution of matches in Don Quixote, compared with that in the Promus;
(3) the three instances of similar, close proximity of two of the matches in both works;
(4) the similar tendency to repeat certain themes in both; and
(5) the fact that several matched entries are first recorded in the Promus. All this, coupled with the fact that many Promus entries are found in works published under Bacon’s name, points to a purposeful connection between part of the Promus, as a starting point, and the English text of Don Quixote, as a later culmination.

OVERALL CONCLUSION

The presence, distribution and frequency in Don Quixote, of the name-cipher, 33- and 100-ciphers, are all strongly associated with the name of Francis Bacon. The disposition of 132 matches of entries in Bacon’s Promus with text of Don Quixote, also points to a connection with Bacon, especially as the Promus was written at about 1594, before the publication of Don Quixote and was not itself published until the turn of this century. Furthermore some matching entries were probably coined by Bacon since they have not been found in earlier works.

REFERENCES

[3] Cervantes, Miguel de (1620) The History of Don Quixote of the
BACONIANA

COMPARISON OF QUOTATIONS FROM DON QUIXOTE

Appendix 1. Comparison of quotations from Don Quixote and entries in the Promus which are either identical or similar in style, wording or meaning (modern analogous proverbs are in quotes; translations and comments are in square brackets; information and translations supplied by Carr are marked *; corresponding alphabetical/numerical entries in Tilley [6] have the suffix (O) where Bacon is the earliest known published source).

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>DON QUIXOTE (1620)</th>
<th>PROMUS (Durning-Lawrence, 1910)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>If thou wilt treat of thieves, I will recite the history of Cacus to thee, for I know it from memory</td>
<td>If thou wilt treat of thieves, I will recite the history of Cacus to thee, for I know it from memory</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Among those books I see, the Lord Raynold of Montalban, with his friends and companions, all of them greater thieves than Cacus</td>
<td>Among those books I see, the Lord Raynold of Montalban, with his friends and companions, all of them greater thieves than Cacus</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The valour of mine arm shall discover the desire I have to do you service</td>
<td>The valour of mine arm shall discover the desire I have to do you service</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>My intentions always aim at the good end, as to do good to all men and hurt to none</td>
<td>My intentions always aim at the good end, as to do good to all men and hurt to none</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Desire I have to do good unto my friends</td>
<td>Desire I have to do good unto my friends</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sprinkle this chamber all about, lest there should lurk in it some one enchanter of the many which these books contain [enchantment, etc. frequent elsewhere]</td>
<td>Sprinkle this chamber all about, lest there should lurk in it some one enchanter of the many which these books contain [enchantment, etc. frequent elsewhere]</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The devil lurks behind the cross</td>
<td>The devil lurks behind the cross</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Take out of him all that of the Castle of Fame, and other impertinences of more consequence</td>
<td>Take out of him all that of the Castle of Fame, and other impertinences of more consequence</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The History of the Curious-Impertinent</td>
<td>The History of the Curious-Impertinent</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
The just pays sometimes for the sinners. All the salves of an hospital will not suffice to bring them [the faithful Sancho’s ‘grief of blows’] to any good terms.

Since thou art my servant, in which respect the ill that touchest me must concern and grieve thee.

Here I [Sancho] have lint and a little unguentum album [white (zinc. i.e. chemical) ointment] in my wallet. All this might be excused ... if I [Don] remembered to take a vialful of the Balsam of Fierabras [contained rosemary (see p.120)].

Lightly, or, as they say, or with the smoke of straws.

Thou mayest ... eat in my dish and drink in the same cup wherein I drink.

For all that, thou shalt sit; for the humble shall be exalted.

Knowing that you know not of this obligation [to favour knights-errant], and yet did reserve and make much of me, it stands with good reason that I do render you thanks with all my heart.

And if you go thus, sir, interrupting my tale at every pace, we shall not be able to end it this year.

You must promise me [Cardenio] that you will not interrupt the file of my doleful narrative ... called to Don Quixote's

De los leales se hinchen los huespitaless [Of the faithfull are hospitals full*]

Galens compositions [herbal remedies] not paracelsus [sic=Philippus Theophrastic von Hohenheim] separations [chemical remedies]

An asses trot and a fyre of strawe dureth not.

We have not drune all of one water.

La oveja mansa mamma su madre y agena [The meek sheep suckes from any ewe*] c.f. 'The meek shall inherit the earth'*

As I did not seeks to wynne your thankes so your courteous acceptacion deserueth myne.

It is like Sr. etc (putting a man agayne into his tale interrupted

---

BACONIANA

1 I 4 VI-VII[33] 312-355 (as above and elsewhere)

1 I 1 VII 42
The just pays sometimes for the sinners

1 I 3 I[15] 107
All the salves of an hospital will not suffice to bring them [the faithful Sancho’s ‘grief of blows’] to any good terms.

2 II 2 201
Since thou art my servant, in which respect the ill that touchest me must concern and grieve thee.

1 I 2 II[10] 63
Here I [Sancho] have lint and a little unguentum album [white (zinc. i.e. chemical) ointment] in my wallet. All this might be excused ... if I [Don] remembered to take a vialful of the Balsam of Fierabras [contained rosemary (see p.120)].

1 I 2 II[10] 65
Lightly, or, as they say, or with the smoke of straws.

1 I 2 III[11] 68
Thou mayest ... eat in my dish and drink in the same cup wherein I drink.

1 I 2 III[11] 68
For all that, thou shalt sit; for the humble shall be exalted.

1 I 2 III[11] 71
Knowing that you know not of this obligation [to favour knights-errant], and yet did reserve and make much of me, it stands with good reason that I do render you thanks with all my heart.

1 I 2 IV[12] 77
And if you go thus, sir, interrupting my tale at every pace, we shall not be able to end it this year.

1 I 3 X[24] 197
You must promise me [Cardenio] that you will not interrupt the file of my doleful narrative ... called to Don Quixote’s remembrance the tale which his squire had told him [p.77, see above] which remained suspended [yet was interrupted (p.203) and was also suspended]

1 1 2 V[13] 86* One swallow makes not a summer

1 1 2 VI[14] 92 But jealousy, with greater vigour, slays [present in a verse]
2 III LX 246 No marvel that jealousy continued the plot of her lamentable story [shooting her lover]

1 1 2 VI[14] 96 True love . . . must needs be voluntary . . . and not forced
2 III XXXV 69 With his good will and not perforce
2 III XLV 133 Forcible woman, but not forced . . . Hercules his force could not have forced you
2 III LX 240 Must be voluntary and not forced
2 III LX 240 volens nolens [willingly, unwillingly]

1 1 2 VI[14] 97 I was born free and . . . with the trees and waters I communicate my thoughts
1 1 2 VI[14] 195 For our will is a free power, and there's no herb or charm can constrain it

1 1 2 VI[14] 97 Persist obstinately without all hope, and sail against the wind

2 III LXII 258 To give counsel to this man is to strive against the stream

1 1 3 I[21] 107 Sancho . . . gather strength out of weakness [grief of the blows received]

1 1 3 I[15] 107 That little beast [Sancho Panza's ass] may supply Rosinante's [Don Quixote's

199* S1025 One swallow[sic] maketh no summer

241 F672 Frenzy Heresy and jealousy are three That seeldom or never cured be (as above)

205 That yt. is forced is not forcible

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

236 T244 Thought is free.

(as above)

223 H355 & H356 Quien al Ciel escape a la cara se le buelve [If you spit at the heavens, it lands on your face* e.f. 'don't spit against the wind']

(as above)

240 A361(O) Tomar asino que me lleve y no cauallo que me derrueque [It is better to ride on a horse's] wants, by carrying me off.

1 I 3 I[15] 107
Fortune leaves always one door open in disasters
1 I 3 IV[18] 135
it is not possible that either good or ill be durable

1 I 3 II[16] 114
He painted her in his fantasy ... embellished
1 I 3 IV[18] 134
Sheep will become men, as right and straight as I painted them to thee at the first
2 III III 209
He painted ... 'As it happens'
2 III XXXII 47
Painted her with all the graces and perfections that please you
2 III XLVIII 145
Paint what you will ... I recreate myself with the painting
2 III LII 189
A scurvy painter that came to this town to paint at random
2 III LIX 236
He paints you out for a glutton, an idiot, and nothing witty, and far different from the Sancho that is described in the First Part
2 III LXXI 319
[paints] that which shall come forth to light ... such ought to be the painter or the writer (for all is one same thing)

1 I 3 III[17] 122
In this time the drench [Fierabras Balsam] had made his operation

1 I 3 IV[18] 127
To leap thus, as they say, out of the frying pan into the fire

1 I 3 VI[20] 148
As covetousness breaks the sack, so hath it also torn my hopes

1 I 3 VI[20] 149
You will do nothing but enrage fortune and, as the proverb says, 'but spurn donkey that carries you than a horse that throws you*

274
When things are at the periods of yll they turn agayne
(as above)

203 (& 271, below)
As please the paynter

271 (& 203, above)
As please the painter

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

273
To drench to potion (to insert

226 F784
To leap owt of the frieng pan into the fyre

223 C744(O)
Covetousness breaks the sacke

240 F433
Foly it is to spurn against the pricke

BACONIANA against the prick.'

1. I. 3. VI[20]. 151
   Keep good account of the goats that the fisherman ferries over [33=Bacon in simple cipher, see Part 11]
2. II. XI. 257
   What people these are thou carriest in thy cart-coach, rather like Charon's boat than wagons now in use

1. I. 3. VI[20]. 158
   Thou must make difference between the master and the man, the lord and his serving man, the knight and his squire: so that . . . we may proceed with more respect
2. II.
   We are bound to respect our masters as if they were our fathers

2. II. V. 219
   The best way is to marry her [Mary Panza] to her equal
2. II. V. 263
   Keep yourself to the proverb. 'Let neighbour's children hold together'

2. III. XXXIII. 55*
   Somewhat [brazen basin] that glistered like gold [helmet]
2. III. XLVIII. 153
   All is not gold that glisteth

1. I. 3. VII[21]. 159
   Where one door is shut another is opened

   See well what you say, sir, and better what you do
2. I. 4. III[30]. 245
   Let thy works verify thy words
2. II. VII. 230
   Have less saying and more doing; for great sayers are small doers

1. I. 3. VII[21]. 234
   Charon's [ferryman's] fares (as above)
2. II. W179
   Thear be more waies to the wood than one

2. II. XVII. 241
   SAieng and doing are two things (as above)
It is in vayne to forbear to renew that greef by speach wch. the want of so great a comfort must needs renew by thee.

Semblances or popularities of good and evill with their redargations [refutations], for Deliberacions (as above)
COMPARISON OF QUOTATIONS FROM DON QUIXOTE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Quotation</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1 II 4 XIV[41]</td>
<td>77 do but shun the good and pursue the evil (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 II 4 XVIII[45]</td>
<td>112 But as a good very seldom, or rather never . . . without being accompanied or followed by an evil (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 I 4 III[30]</td>
<td>294 I did willingly forget it (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 I 4 IV[31]</td>
<td>297 But it is not lost that comes in last (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 I 4 IV[31]</td>
<td>299 A sparrow in the fist is worth more than a flying bittern (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 II VII</td>
<td>230 A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 II XII</td>
<td>261 One bird in the hand is better than two in the bush (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 III XXXV</td>
<td>71 Better a bird in the hand than two in the bush (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 III LXXI</td>
<td>320 better is one sparrow in the hand than a vulture flying in the air (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 I 4 IV[31]</td>
<td>304 Although you should see me [Andrew] torn to pieces, yet do not succour or help me but leave me in my disgrace; for it cannot be so great but that a greater will result from your help (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 I 4 V[32]</td>
<td>309</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

Colors of good and evil:

- 204 (& 25, above) You draw for colors but it prooueth contrarie
- 214 (& 253 below) The art of forgetting
- 253 (& 214 above) Art of forgetting
- 199 & 256 Well to forgett (as above)

---

We may do much yll or we doe much woorse:

- 196 125 We may doe much yll ere he doe much woorse
- 240 He may doe much yll ere he doe much woorse [inn-keeper to Curate] Cast that bone to another dog... go not about to give me pap

As though I know not... where the shoe wrests me now

To set the bridel to any malignant tongue

It served as a bridle to restrain Lothano's tongue

she being privy to our proceedings, she sets a bridle on me and constrains me to conceal hers

Gotten the bridle betwixt his teeth

Bridle thy tongue

Bridle malicious tongues

I was almost persuaded to leave thee in thine humour, in punishment for thine inordinate and unreasonable desire, but that love which I bear towards thee doth not consent

Between an anvil and a hammer

For though the tongue spoke not, yet did his thoughts discover

He that gives quickly gives twice

Hasty work is never well performed

That which costeth little is less esteemed

No one could hear her that would not deem her to be one of the most esteemed and loyal damsel in the world, and take her lady for another new and persecuted Penelope

The detiull hath cast a bone to sett strife

My self can tell best where my shoe wringes me

To bite the bridle [sic.]

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

(as above)

Vpon question to reward evill wth. evill

Between the hammer and the Andville

Mot.[ion] of the mynd explicat in woordes implicat in thougths

The hasty bych whelpes a blind lytter

Valew me not ye. lesse by-cause I am yours

Penelopes webb [weaving & unravelling Laertes' Shroud]
My earldom will dissolve like salt cast into water

All would be well ended to his heart's desire

I was the builder and contriver of my own dishonour [having told his friend of a plan to test his wife's faithfulness and failed to heed his advice against the scheme]

End of war is peace, and that herein it doth excel the end of learning

The pains of the student are commonly ... poverty ... many gain ... reward justly merited by their virtue but ... turn their nakedness into pomp

Father passed the bounds of liberality and touched nearly the confines of prodigality: a thing nothing profitable to a married man, who had children that should succeed him

He demanded fifty pounds of raisins and three bushels of wheat [53= simple numerical cypher for SOW (Son of Wisdom, p.53 Whitney's Choice of Emblems (1586))]

Many times ... ransomed men ... did not return for him that had ransomed him

Money well paid and the arms broken

The wind did arise so much as it made us, abandoning our oars, to set sail

A happy end to so lucky a beginning
Others that had great beginnings and so conserve them til the end

1 II 4 XVII[43] 96
Perhaps by not seeing him, and the great distance... my pain... will be somewhat allayed
2 III LXVI 293
The heart dreams not of what the eye sees not

2 II 4 XIX[46] 122
Diligence is the mother of good hap

1 II 4 XIX[46] 122
Obtain the victory before an adversary can put himself in defense
2 III XXVI 3
Look ye how the sentence is put in execution before the fault be scarce committed

1 II 4 XX[47] 138
Untruth is so much more pleasing by how much the nearer it resembles the truth
2 III LXII 265
Your feigned histories are so much the more good and delightful by how much they come near the truth

1 II 4 XXI[48] 141
So wedded to their opinions, as no reason can woo, nor demonstration win them from it

1 II 4 XXI[48] 146
They... are... plotters of... your kind of carrying away, for mere emulation that they see you surpass them both in achieving famous acts
2 II III 210
Men famous for their wits, great poets, illustrious historians, are also always, or for, the most part, envied
2 II VI 222
Will... reverence him for what he is, except the envious, whom the greatest escape not

1 II 4 XXI[48] 148
Have you had a desire to do that which cannot be undone?

241 E247
That the eye seeth not the heart rueth not

(as above)

240 N299 & D338
Nothing is impossible to a willing hand

227 S856
Yow would be over the stile before yow come at it

(as above)

208 L237(O)
i mentira saqueras verdad | Tell lies and you will extract the truth*

(as above & 223)
Tell a lye to knowe a treuth

223
224
240

Hombre apercebido medio cambatido
[The astute man is always resented—]

(as above)

(as above)

Thinges doone cannot be vndoone
1 II 4 XXIV[51] 169
I rail on the lightness of women . . . and the small discretion they show in placing their affections
2 II 198
That Angelica . . . was a light housewife, a gadder, and a wanton . . . her base prostitution
1 II 4 XXV[52] 173
I will say it in one [word] . . . and it is this;
[65 words follow!]
2 III 109
I will tell thee in few words what hath befallen me [3/4 page follows]

2 II Prologue 185
As he bath brewed so let him bake
2 II Prologue 185
A soldier had rather be dead in the battle than free by running away
2 II Prologue 188
Plenty of everything, though never so good, makes it less esteemed
2 II 215
Valour is a mean between the two extremes of a coward and a rash man
2 III XL 94
A mean [average] which ought to be sought in all well-ordered actions
2 III XLII 109
Always strive to be held mean and virtuous rather than proud and vicious . . . follow virtue for your mean
2 III XLIII 112
Eat little . . . Be temperate . . . let thy sleep be moderate
2 III XLVII 139
He that drinks much kills and consumes his humidum radicale, wherein life consists
2 III XLVII 140
Omnis saturatio mala . . . All surfeit is ill
2 III LI 179
Be not always cruel, nor always merciful: choose a mean betwixt these two extremes
2 II Prologue 188
The Second Part of Don Quixote which

She is light she may be taken in play
(as above)

B654
As he brues so he must drinke
222
M703
Better be Martyr then Confessor
218
To[sic] much of one thing is good for nothing
(as above)
210 few woordes need much may be said.
(as above)

El lobo & la vulpeja son todos d'vna

35
I offer thee is cut from the same cloth that the first was

They would not renew and bring to his remembrance things done and past [but he did remember (pp. 191-192)]

Madmen . . . one . . . graduated . . . at Osuna, and though he had been graduated at Salamanca, yet . . . he would have been mad there too (as above)

When the head aches all the body is out of tune
The rest of the parts must participate of the heads grief

Let every man look to himself and not take white for black and black for white
Out of madness . . . to judge black for white and white for black

Look not a given horse in the mouth
(as above)

I look not a given horse in the mouth

There is a time to attempt, a time to retire
There's a time to laugh and a time too mourn
A good expectation is better than a bad possession and a good demand better than an ill pay

Let's be happy and wise and cast not rope after the bucket consejo [The wolf and the young fox are cut from the same piece of cloth*]

COMPARISON OF QUOTATIONS FROM DON QUIXOTE

2  III  XLIX  156

Let's be merry and wise (as above)

2  II  X  246

For truth is stretched but never breaks and tramples on the lie as oil doth upon water

2  II  X  247-248

He began to discourse thus to himself... this soliloquy passed... and the upshot was...

2  II  X  248

Seek better bread than's made from wheat

2  III  LXVIII  292

I seek not in other men's houses better bread than is made from wheat

2  II  XIII  267

Good fare lessens care

2  II  XIV  277

shaking from her locks an infinite number of liquid pearls... they sported and rained white and small pearls

2  III  XLIX  163

She wept not tears, but seed-pearl

2  II  XVI  292

The natural poet that helps himself with art shall be much better and have the advantage of that poet that only out of his art strives to be so

2  II  XVII  294*

He that is warned is half armed

2  II  XVII  301

Ancient use of knights-errant that would change their names when they please or thought convenient

2  II  XIX  316

Good language which is accompanied with practice

2  II  XXIII  347

We are all bound to reverence our elders

240 Better to bow then [sic] to breake

217

199 Notwithstanding his dialogues (of one that giueth life to his speech by way of quaec*

226 B622 He would haue better bread than can be made from wheat[1][sic]

(as above)

224 Todos los duelos con pan son buenos

[Every morning is good with bread*]

236 Haile of perle

236 (as above)

205 More ingenious then [sic] naturall

2418 H54

Warned and half armed

201 Honest men hardly chaung their name

240 U24

Vse maketh mastery

240 B354

They that are bownd must obey
BACONIANA

2 III XXXIX 22
Bless ourselves and weigh anchor
2 III LXIII 268
To weigh anchor
2 III XXXI 37
On with thy tale and make an end of it
2 III XXXII 41
That your poor scholars account me a madman, that never trod the paths of knight-errantry, I care not a chip
2 III XXXIII 54
Nobody lies in wait to hear us, besides the bystanders
2 III XXXV 129
All the bystanders laughed
2 III XLV 133
The bystanders admired afresh at the judgements and sentences
2 III XXX 142
Sancho was astonished, and the bystanders-by seemed to be no otherwise
2 III XLIX 157
At a gaming house... I being present judged many a doubtful card
2 III LIII 186
Read it aloud... that the bystanders might hear it
2 III XXXIII 55*
The nearer the church the further from God
2 III XLVII 142
The nearer the church the farther from God
2 III XXXIII 59
Extolled them above the moon
2 III XXXIV 63
God's help is better than early rising
2 III XXXIV 65
Now I believe that in hell you have honest men 229
To way anchor
(as above)
205
Let me make an end of my tale[s], [sic]
That which I will say will make an end of it 218
Many a man speaketh of Rob. hood that neuer shott in his bowe
202
Sometymes a slander by seelh more than a plaicr
(as above)
217*
C380
The nearer the church the furder from God
(as above)
224
M1114
To cast beyond the moone
195
Mas vale a quién Dios ayuda que a quién mucho madruga. [It is better to have God's help than to keep getting up early*] 195
Quien nesciamente pecca nesciamente va al infierno [He who sins unknowingly, unknowingly goes to hell
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Chapter</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>XXXIII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>XXXVIII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>XLII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>XLII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>XLII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>XLII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>XLIII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>XLIII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>XLIII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>XLV</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>XLV</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>XLVII</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Comparison of Quotations from Don Quixote

- Page 86

  "Like sharp thorns, but soft, traverse the soul and wound it like lightning, leaving the garment sound."

- Page 88

  "I go and yet I stay."

- Page 108

  "Thou, that in my opinion art a very goose... attribute not this happiness to thy deserts, but that thou give God thanks that sweetly disposeth things.

- Page 109

  "Thou shalt learn not to be swoln like a frog."

- Page 109

  "Know thyself... rejoice in the humility of thy lineage... for when thou art not ashamed thyself, nobody will seek to make thee so... an infinite number from low beginnings have come to great risings."

- Page 110

  "Turn thy eyes from her tears and thy ears from her lamentations."

- Page 282

  "Silence spoke for the two lovers, and their eyes were tongues that discovered their joyful but honest thoughts."

- Page 115

  "And might overcomes right."

- Page 132

  "Run after yon woman, and take her purse from her."

- Page 139

- Page 220

  "A thorn is gentle when it is young."

- Page 240

  "We be but where we were."

- Page 218

  "God sendeth fortune tofooles."

- Page 213

  "Tale of ye. frogg that swelled."

- Page 199

  "Make much of yourselfe."

- Page 251

  "The ey is the gate of the affection, but the ear of the understanding."

- Page 240

  "Might overcome right."

- Page 215

  "Goe yow after him that beareth the purse."

- Page 230

  "A dog in the manger."

- Page 239

  "Perro del hortelano [que no come ni deja correr al amo] [The gardener's dog neither eats nor lets his master eat]."
Like tempering with phisike a good diet much better

2 Two dozen acorns [acorns also mentioned on pp. 170-172, 189 & 190]

I think to leave this idle life ere long, for I was not born to it

2 Send that no man pity thee

The medicines he uses are diet upon diet

2 Marry them for better for worse

Let my ant’s wings remain that lifted me up in the air

The proverb that says the ant had wings to do her hurt

2 Every man is the artificer of his own fortune

Neither do good or evil fall out by chance, but by the particular providence of Heaven

Give me the cloak when it rains

BACONIANA

[After 2pp. of narrative] Come to the matter without fetches, or lanes, or digressions, or additions [continues for another 1/2 page]

She that desires to see hath a desire likewise to be seen

My husband will be known by me more than I by him

Two dozen acorns [acorns also mentioned on pp. 170-172, 189 & 190]

I think to leave this idle life ere long, for I was not born to it

Send that no man pity thee

The medicines he uses are diet upon diet

Marry them for better for worse

Let my ant’s wings remain that lifted me up in the air

The proverb that says the ant had wings to do her hurt

Every man is the artificer of his own fortune

Neither do good or evil fall out by chance, but by the particular providence of Heaven

Give me the cloak when it rains

Of speaches digressive; this goeth not to the ende of the matter;

I had rather know then be knowne (as above)

Satis quercus [oak]; Enowgh of Acornes

I cannot be idle vp as yow canne

Better be envyed then [sic] pyttied

Like tempering with phisike a good diet much better

Be it better be it woorse

La hormiga quandose a deperder nasciente alas [The ant grows wings when it has to disappear in a hurry*] (as above)

A mans customes are the mowldes whear his fortune is cast

It is goddes doing

A cloke for the Rayne
COMPARISON OF QUOTATIONS FROM DON QUIXOTE

2  III  L.XIX  298
This wind winnows no corn
(as above)

2  III  L.XXI  315
... half ryals ... whole ryals ... fifteen ryals ... eight hundres and twenty-five ryals [8 + 25 = 33]

218  W421 (&W410)
An yll wynd that bloweth no man to good
All this wynd shakes no Corn

217  [i.e. reveal all?]
Altogether, 112 entries in English in Francis Bacon’s manuscript collection of proverbs, etc. – his ‘Promus’ [6] are matched in the text of Don Quixote [1]. Of these, more than half (63) are also listed in Tilley’s collection of proverbs of the 16th and 17th centuries [2] which appear under a variety of authors, some of whose works were published well before Bacon wrote the Promus (c.1594).

The most frequently quoted author of these proverbs is John Heywood, who accounts for 41 in all, 34 published in 1546 [3], a further five which he published in 1562 [4] and two more, reported separately in another work of his in 1562 [5].

Fourteen of the Heywood entries are not listed under any other earlier authors’ names, and of these, three are reported next in Bacon’s Promus. This suggests that Bacon used Heywood for these three proverbs and, furthermore, may also have used him as a more general source of English proverbs.

Numerical Distribution of Quotations from Heywood (1546 & 1562) in Bacon’s Promus (pages 195-241) and Don Quixote

(FIG. 1)
JOHN HEYWOOD AS A PROBABLE SOURCE FOR FRANCIS BACON

To examine this possibility, the sequence of occurrence of the proverbs in the Promus has been compared with that of Heywood, the assumption being that Bacon would have tended to thumb through Heywood from beginning to end, making extracts for his Promus as he went. (There is evidence that he did this for other sources which are reported separately in the next article in this Number).

RESULTS

A few of the proverbs occur singly on a page of the Promus, but the rest occur in three small clusters on pairs of adjacent pages (Fig. 1). These clusters tend to be larger towards the end of the Promus.

The sequential order in which the entries of each of these three groups appears in the Promus has been compared with the corresponding order in Heywood (1546). There appears to be no consistent correlation in order in the first group on page 217, although the last five entries on page 218 in the Promus do follow the order in Heywood. But there clearly is a general correlation in the second cluster on page 227 and a marked correlation in the last and largest group on pages 240 and 241 (Fig. 2).

Relation between Order of Promus Entries in English (pp. 240 & 241) found in Don Quixote & their Order in Heywood (1546)

(FIG. 2)

These results suggest that Bacon, in writing his Promus did, indeed, consult Heywood increasingly, making him an important source of English proverbs in the Promus and indirectly, therefore, also in Don Quixote.

INCLUSION OF ALL PROMUS ENTRIES

The argument for Bacon having used Heywood as a source for a substantial number of his quotations of English proverbs, which is based on those that are common to his Promus and Don Quixote, can be pursued further here by considering the rest of the English proverbs in the Promus, of which about two-thirds are also listed in Tilley [2]. In this way the total number available for analysis is increased to 171. Of these 124 are to be found in Heywood (1546), 21 in Heywood ‘Epigrams’ (1562) of which 20 also appear in Heywood (1546), whilst ten others appear only in Heywood ‘Dialogues’ (1562). Full details are given in Appendix I in which the page references have been taken from Tilley and also supplemented in parenthesis: it is clear, from an examination of the original copy of Heywood (1546) in the British Library alongside that of the Spencer Society edition (in which two works of 1562 also appear in the same volume) that the suffixes quoted by Tilley refer to the signature letters and numbers for the bound sections. These suffixes are, therefore, in chronological order, the ‘v’ in the suffix referring to following pages in each bound section having no signature. Corresponding suffixes for Heywood (1562) have been added in parentheses to make it clear that the Dialogues are revised from the earlier edition, the Epigrams being quite new. Page references to Don Quixote are from the Macmillan edition [7].

HEYWOOD (1546)

Of the 124 proverbs that occur only in Heywood (1546), almost half (56) are not listed under any earlier authors, again suggesting Heywood as a prime source. All but half a dozen of the 124 are clustered in seven groups on adjacent lines or on adjacent pages of the Promus. These comprise pages 199-200, 204, 209, 217-219, 224-227, 233-234 and 240-241. The clusters are shown along the abscissa of Fig. 3, with the corresponding chronological positions in Heywood shown on the ordinate as a decimalised version of the sequence (of part, chapter and alphabetical Order of English Proverbs in the Promus matches with the order in Heywood, 1546 (Pt. I, Ch. i-xii & Pt. II, Ch. i-xi)

(FIG. 3)

Heywood (decimalised order)

Groups of successive Promus entries suffix references). Except for the small first and sixth groups and the first entry of the fifth group, all the entries in the Promus follow closely the order in Heywood, adding strong evidence that they were copied out, systematically in order, by Bacon.

HEYWOOD DIALOGUES (1562)

Of the additional ten proverbs that occur only in Heywood Dialogues (1562), five are not listed under any earlier work. The ten are scattered among the others of Heywood, but are also seen to be in chronological order in the Promus, where two or more occur on adjacent lines or pages, as is the case for three groups comprising pages 218-219, 225-227 and 240-241.

HEYWOOD EPIGRAMS (1562)

Although there are the 21 cases of matches of Promus entries with Heywood Epigrams (1562), this work does not appear to be a main source for Bacon, all but one (all from ‘the three hundred epigrams upon three hundred proverbs’) being duplicated in Heywood’s earlier listed work. None of ‘the first hundred of epigrams’ is utilised, nor any of the ‘fifth hundred’ or ‘sixi hundred’.
RATIO OF HEYWOOD (1546) TO HEYWOOD DIALOGUES (1562)

In the Promus as a whole, the ratio of the number of proverbs from Heywood (1546) to the number from Heywood Dialogues (1562) is 11.4 to 1; the corresponding ratio for Don Quixote is very close at 12.3 to 1. Such a close similarity in these two ratios supports the conclusion that the Promus was used as a source of the Heywood proverbs that are found in Don Quixote.

DISTRIBUTION OF PROVERBS FROM HEYWOOD (1546)

Further similarities between the Promus and Don Quixote are also evident in the extent to which the two parts of Heywood (1546) and the total of 24 different chapters therein feature as sources for the proverbs. The general relation between the two works is illustrated in Fig. 4 and an Analysis of Variance shows the similarity to be statistically very highly significant (P<0.001). The data for particular chapters are further identified in Table 1.

English Proverbs from Heywood (1546) common to the Promus and Don Quixote compared with all those in the Promus (Number per chapter of Heywood)

(FIG. 4)
Table 1. Number of entries from Heywood (1546) found in Bacon's Promus and matched in Don Quixote

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Heywood (1546) Part</th>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Promus Number (% of total)</th>
<th>Don Quixote Number (% or total)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>2</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>3</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>4</td>
<td>2</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>5</td>
<td>2</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>6</td>
<td>1</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7</td>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>8</td>
<td>1</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>9</td>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>10</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11</td>
<td>12</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>12</td>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>13</td>
<td>Total 41 (36)</td>
<td>14 (37)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>2</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>3</td>
<td>7</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>4</td>
<td>8</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>5</td>
<td>17</td>
<td>7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>6</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>8</td>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>9</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>10</td>
<td>2</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11</td>
<td>Total 73 (64)</td>
<td>24 (63)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Grand total 114 (100)</td>
<td>38 (100)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The table shows: firstly, that in these two works there is a preponderance of proverbs from Part II, compared with Part I (64% and 63%, respectively); and secondly, that in both cases, the most frequently used chapters are Chapter 10 in Part I and Chapters 5 & 9 in Part II. Finally, six chapters (Chapters 2, 6, 7 & 13 in Part I and Chapters 1 & 10 in Part II) are not represented at all in either work.
Again, this close similarity reinforces the conclusion that the same mind was behind writing both the English version of Don Quixote and the Promus.

The predilection for certain chapters by the author of Don Quixote and the author of the Promus is more clearly seen by comparing the distribution of all proverbs in Don Quixote that are found in Heywood (i.e. including a further 30 not found in the Promus) with all those in the Promus. This is shown in Fig. 5.

The texts of the entries in the Promus that are matched in Heywood and Don Quixote are shown in Appendix II.

OVERALL CONCLUSION

That Bacon made use of Heywood (1546 & 1562), particularly the former as a main source of the English proverbs listed in his Promus is very strongly indicated by the close similarity in the chronological sequences of the proverbs listed by these two authors.

Furthermore, that Bacon was closely involved in the writing of the English text of Don Quixote is very strongly indicated by:
JOHN HEYWOOD AS A PROBABLE SOURCE FOR FRANCIS BACON

1) the close similarity between the Promus and Don Quixote in the ratio of English proverbs taken from Heywood (1546) to those taken from Heywood Dialogues (1562) and
2) the statistically highly significant correlation between the Promus and Don Quixote in the relative numbers of English proverbs that are found in the different chapters of Heywood (1546).

REFERENCES

Note: References Nos. 4 and 5 appear to be combined in the copy of Heywood (1562) held in the British Library (Shelf No. C38-E28) and includes ‘...A sixt hundred of Epigrammes’
APPENDIX I
Details of the data used in the present analysis
('Suf.' = suffix; D.Q. = Don Quixote)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>195 14</td>
<td>II 213</td>
<td>ii ix</td>
<td></td>
<td>B436</td>
<td></td>
<td>1 xi 32(D3v)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>196 1</td>
<td>I 304</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>199 18</td>
<td>II ii G1 v</td>
<td>F515</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>200 6</td>
<td>II iii G2 v</td>
<td>R213</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>204 12-13</td>
<td>I i A2</td>
<td>M887</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14</td>
<td>II ix K4 v</td>
<td>B436</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15</td>
<td>II ix L1 v</td>
<td>L324</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>209 2</td>
<td>I ii D4 v</td>
<td>G7</td>
<td>150</td>
<td>151(T2v)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>II ix I2</td>
<td>P96</td>
<td>118</td>
<td>145(T1)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>213 7</td>
<td>III 109</td>
<td>E1</td>
<td>T362</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>II ii F4 v</td>
<td>L188</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>215 28-9</td>
<td>I v B2</td>
<td>P646</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>217 15</td>
<td>I v B2</td>
<td>C349</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23</td>
<td>III 142</td>
<td>C1 v</td>
<td>C380</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>24</td>
<td>III 142</td>
<td>x C4 v</td>
<td>A146</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25</td>
<td>I x D1</td>
<td>B247</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>131(R2)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>27</td>
<td>I xi D2</td>
<td>S885</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28</td>
<td>I xi D3 v</td>
<td>C326</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>218 1</td>
<td>I xii E4</td>
<td>B59</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>I xii E4 v</td>
<td>P405</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>I xii E4 v</td>
<td>C412</td>
<td>262</td>
<td>167(X3v)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>II iv G2 v</td>
<td>S812</td>
<td>271</td>
<td>168(X3v)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>II iv G3 v</td>
<td>I106</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>II v H1</td>
<td>S706</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>II v H3</td>
<td>C142</td>
<td>117</td>
<td>145(T1)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>II v H3 v</td>
<td>M1231</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11</td>
<td>II vi I1</td>
<td>R148</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15</td>
<td>II vi I1 v</td>
<td>G220</td>
<td>124</td>
<td>145(T1)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16</td>
<td>II vii I4 v</td>
<td>M788</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18</td>
<td>II 102</td>
<td>K1 v</td>
<td>H275</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19</td>
<td>III 251</td>
<td>L1</td>
<td>T122</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>20</td>
<td>III 298</td>
<td>L1</td>
<td>W421</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>21</td>
<td>III 298</td>
<td>L1</td>
<td>W415</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>22</td>
<td>I 159</td>
<td>L1</td>
<td>W179</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23</td>
<td>II ix L1</td>
<td>T403</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25</td>
<td></td>
<td>S560</td>
<td>II ix 78(K3v)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

50
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Column 1</th>
<th>Column 2</th>
<th>Column 3</th>
<th>Column 4</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>26</td>
<td>II</td>
<td>ix</td>
<td>L2</td>
<td>P199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>27</td>
<td>II</td>
<td>ix</td>
<td>L2</td>
<td>M113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>219</td>
<td>I</td>
<td>II</td>
<td>ix</td>
<td>L3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>221</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>III</td>
<td>112</td>
<td>i</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>224</td>
<td>13</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>14</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>15</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>17</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>18-9</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>20</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>22</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>225</td>
<td>2</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>3-4</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>5</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7-8</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>9</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>12</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>14</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>15</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>16</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>226</td>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>4</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>5</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>8</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>9</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>11</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>12</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>14</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>15</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>16</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>227</td>
<td>1</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>2</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>4</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>5-6</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>7</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

51
BACONIANA

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Column</th>
<th>Line</th>
<th>Line Reference</th>
<th>Text</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>II</td>
<td>11</td>
<td>ix</td>
<td>L2 v S856</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>231</td>
<td>iv</td>
<td>G3 v L376</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>233</td>
<td>viii</td>
<td>K2 B670</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>234</td>
<td>15 v</td>
<td>B2 v H1678</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I</td>
<td>240</td>
<td>iii</td>
<td>A4 v H279</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>iv</td>
<td>B1 v S797-8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>x</td>
<td>G3 v L170</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>x</td>
<td>C3 v U1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>12</td>
<td>x</td>
<td>C3 v B259</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>x</td>
<td>C4 v T200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>x</td>
<td>C4 v P581</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>III</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>x</td>
<td>D1 v S623</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>III</td>
<td>16</td>
<td>x</td>
<td>D2 v E177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I</td>
<td>17</td>
<td>x</td>
<td>E1 v M100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I</td>
<td>18</td>
<td></td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>20</td>
<td>ii</td>
<td>F4 v U24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>21</td>
<td>ii</td>
<td>G1 L559</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>22</td>
<td>ii</td>
<td>H2 B354</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I</td>
<td>23</td>
<td>v</td>
<td>H2 F433</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>24</td>
<td>v</td>
<td>H2 S491</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>25</td>
<td>v</td>
<td>H2 v M922</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>27</td>
<td>v</td>
<td>H4 T338</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>28</td>
<td>v</td>
<td>H4 S663</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I-2</td>
<td>241</td>
<td>vi</td>
<td>I1 A15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I</td>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
<td>160 S119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>vi</td>
<td>L1 v H140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>vi</td>
<td>I1 v H515</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>vi</td>
<td>I1 v L458</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>vi</td>
<td>I2 H54</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>vi</td>
<td>I2 N25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>vii</td>
<td>I2 v F672</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>11</td>
<td>vii</td>
<td>I3 E274</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>II</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>viii</td>
<td>K2 P669</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

52
Promus

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>p.</th>
<th>line</th>
<th>Text</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>195</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>Black will take no other hue</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>196</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>We may doe much yll or we doe much woorse</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| 204 | 12 | Who so knew what would be dear
Need be a marchant but a year |
| 213 | 7 | Tale of ye. frogg that swelled |
| 217 | 23 | The nearer the church the furder from God* |
| 218 | 24 | All is not gold that glisters* |
| 218 | 18 | When the head akes all the body is the worse |
| 19 | When thecues fall owt trew men come to their good |
| 20 | An yll wind that bloweth no man to good |
| 21 | All this wynd shakes no Corn |
| 22 | Thcar be more waies to the wood then one |
| 221 | 7 | Garlike and beans |
| 224 | 14 | To beat the bush wh[i]le another catches the byrd |
| 15 | To cast beyond the moone |
| 17 | As he brues so he must drinke |
| 225 | 15 | It may ryme but it accords not |
| 226 | 3 | Thought is free |
| 4 | Te deuill hath cast a bone to sett strife |
| 14 | My self can tell best where my shoe wringes me |
| 15 | A cloke for the Rayne |
| 16 | To leap owt of the freing pan into the fyre |
| 20 | He would have better bread than can be made of whea[t] |
| 227 | 11 | Yow would be ouer the stile before yew come at it |
| 234 | 30 | To looke a gyven horse in the mouth |
| 240 | 4 | Nothing is impossible to a willing hand |
| 6 | Better to bow then to breake |
| 7 | Of suffrance cometh ease |
| 12 | Of a good begynyng comes a good ending |
| 13 | Things doone cannot be vndoone |
| 15 | Some what is better than nothing |
| 16 | Better be envyed then pytied |
| 18 | We be but where we were |

---

*APPENDIX II
Texts of Promus entries that are matched in Heywood (1546 & 1562) and Don Quixote (order as in Appendix I)
20 Vse maketh mastery
22 They that are bownd must obey
23 Foly it is to spurn against the pricke
25 Might overcomes right

1 There is no good accord whear euery one would be a lord
3 Saieng and doing are two things
4 Better be happy then wise
7 Warned and half armed
9 Frenzy Heresy and jalousy are three That seldome or neuer cured be 11 That the ey seeth not the hart rueth not

Also adjacent in Don Quixote
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

by

John S. Alabaster

In view of the length of this paper, a table of contents is prefixed to enable the reader to be selective.

CONTENTS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CONTENTS</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>INTRODUCTION</td>
<td>56</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Latin entries and sources</td>
<td>57</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>RESULTS</td>
<td>58</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summary of Latin sources</td>
<td>58</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sequence of entries by author and by chronology within works</td>
<td>62</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Erasmus</td>
<td>63</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Virgil</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Vulgate</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Horace</td>
<td>68</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ovid</td>
<td>68</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other authors</td>
<td>71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summary of sequences</td>
<td>71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Unidentified entries</td>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Match of a Latin Promus entry with the Latin in Don Quixote</td>
<td>73</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Matches of English translations of Latin Promus entries with the English in Don Quixote</td>
<td>73</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page references of matches</td>
<td>74</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Textual details of matches</td>
<td>75</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Selection of available Promus entries</td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Matches between the Promus and works under Bacon’s name</td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Matches elsewhere between Promus Latin entries and Don Quixote</td>
<td>85</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Subject matter of matches in Don Quixote — one example, the law</td>
<td>85</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Importance of law</td>
<td>85</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bribery</td>
<td>86</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Moderation</td>
<td>87</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

55
INTRODUCTION

The large number of matches found between the entries in both English and Spanish in Bacon’s ‘Promus’ on the one hand, and the English text of ‘Don Quixote’ on the other, have already been described in some detail [1]. No consideration had been given, however, to the Latin entries which are rather more numerous than those in English, although Carr [2] has noted that ‘Bis dat qui cito dat’ (‘he who gives quickly, gives twice’) which is found in the Promus also occurs in English in Don Quixote. It is true that Pott [3] included the Latin entries in her study of all the entries in the Promus in relation to the works under the name of Shakespeare and several hundred other authors of the 15th, 16th and 17th centuries, but she did not consider them in relation to Don Quixote.

The present study aims mainly to provide new English translations of the Latin entries, not only to facilitate a search for matches in Don Quixote, but also to shed further light on Bacon’s foci of interest, particularly for those unfamiliar with Latin. The present translations have kindly been made by Philip H. Bartholomew using the printed version of the Promus produced by Durning-Lawrence [6]. They are listed under his name in the Appendix. He has confirmed many of the translations noted by Pott (who relied on the manuscript version of the Promus), as well as many of her ascriptions of Promus entries to their place of origin in classical and post-classical literature, but he has also provided a large number of different translations, corrected some erroneous references and made 52 new ascriptions of entries to their presumed source. The term ‘source’ is used advisedly here, since Bacon may not have consulted the work in question directly, but found the material through other authors.

A search for matches of the entries in Latin, as well as in their English translations, has been made using the 1620 edition of Don Quixote [4]. and also a small sample of other works of Bacon [5], the results of all of which to date are summarised here. Nevertheless, this account should not be taken as final since experience shows that it is all too easy to miss essential details.

LATIN ENTRIES AND SOURCES

The Latin entries taken from Durning-Lawrence are listed in the Appendix (using Durning-Lawrence’s pagination and the line number of each page) together with their Latin source references, where identified, although the absence of a source does not necessarily mean that one does not exist. Some of the entries are also referred to in Tables in which matches are further detailed. Bartholomew comments that:

1) Many of the entries are extremely cryptic and should be studied in their original context. Moreover their meaning sometimes becomes clear only from their position in the Promus. In particular, the significance of Entry 265.17 [page and line reference in the Appendix] and 265.20 become clear only when they are taken in conjunction with 265.15 and 265.18, respectively, both composed by Bacon.

2) In some cases he suspects that Bacon recorded a quotation to remind himself of the whole passage of which it formed a part. An example would be ‘Hae tibi erunt artes’ (243.20): this is part of a passage in Book VI of the Aeneid in which Virgil describes Rome’s destiny as an imperial power.

3) In a large number of instances, Bacon’s version of the original Latin text differs slightly, but significantly, from the version which appears in the standard modern edition. This suggests that he would sometimes rely on his memory for a quotation rather than the printed text. This is clearly illustrated by 265.4, where Bacon converts Virgil’s ‘Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes’ into ‘Memo danaos et dona ferentes’, although in this case no alteration has been made to the sense of Virgil’s Latin. Throughout the Appendix, translations are provided of Bacon’s own words.

4) In a few instances he has been forced to make small alterations to the Latin printed by Durning-Lawrence [indicated by square brackets with an asterisk] in order to make sense of it. The difficulty probably stems from the problems encountered when the transcription was made.

5) All biblical references are to the Vulgate bible [7].

6) All references to Erasmus in the Appendix are to his ‘Adagia’ [8]
The Adagia of Erasmus are themselves often quotations from classical authors. Bartholomew has generally assumed that Bacon used Erasmus rather than the great variety of classical writers to whom Erasmus refers, and therefore has cited the Erasmus passages only. But in some cases, the classical source used by Erasmus is one that was also known to Bacon at first hand. Here it is impossible to tell whether Bacon had Erasmus or his source in mind, and he has therefore cited both the adage and the original classical source. These cases are: six passages from Horace (219.6, 236.4, 241.27, 242.2, 242.4, & 243.1), four passages from Virgil (232.12, 234.18, 234.28 & 236.8) and one from the Old Testament (230.24). Bacon may also have known Martial and Terence at first hand (see Note 7, below), and these cases have been cited in square brackets along with Erasmus at 198.16 (and the duplicate at 238.9) and 235.14, respectively. However, Bacon does not seem to have known Juvenal, so the Juvenal reference is also in square brackets in 195.17 and 220.16.

7) Apart from Erasmus and the Vulgate, Bacon quotes Virgil, Ovid and Horace with such frequency that Bartholomew finds it impossible to believe that he did not know these authors at first hand. But there are six classical writers whom Bacon quotes either once, or only on a handful of occasions. These are Cicero, Lucan, Martial, Sallust, Seneca and Terence. Bartholomew asks, ‘Did Bacon know the original text of these authors? Or did he simply make extracts from anthologies which may perhaps have been in circulation at the time he was writing?’

8) Bacon’s familiarity with classical authors extended far beyond the writers mentioned in the preceding note: Tacitus, in particular, was a favourite. But no reference is made to these writers in the Promus. Is it permissible, Bartholomew asks, to suggest that Bacon may have produced a second manuscript, equivalent to the Promus, which contained quotations from classical authors not cited there? Either this putative manuscript does not survive, or (just possibly) still awaits discovery. Detailed examination of the Latin entries throws some light on the questions raised by Bartholomew in the two preceding paragraphs, 6 and 7.

RESULTS

SUMMARY OF LATIN SOURCES

In all, there are 759 entries in Latin, of which about 5% (40) are duplicates, well spread out over the relevant 77 pages in the Promus; half are within 15 pages of each other and three-quarters within 35 pages. The distribution of the Latin entries in the Promus is shown in the upper part of Fig. 1, giving the total number per page. These numbers tend to be inversely correlated with those of the English entries shown in the lower half of the figure (the vertical scale of which is reversed for convenience of plotting and comparison). Latin sources have been identified in 575 (76%) cases which are summarised in Table 1; Erasmus accounts for the bulk of Latin sources, followed by Virgil, the Vulgate, Ovid and Horace. A handful (nine) was untranslatable and the remaining 178 (with eight duplicates) were probably mostly Bacon's own invention.

Table 1. Summary of Identified Latin Sources of Promus Entries (with duplicates in parentheses)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Author/Work</th>
<th>Number</th>
<th>Approximate Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Erasmus</td>
<td>235(9)</td>
<td>41</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Virgil</td>
<td>110(6)</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vulgate</td>
<td>97(10)</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ovid</td>
<td>63(4)</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Horace</td>
<td>50(2)</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Others</td>
<td>20(1)</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TOTAL</td>
<td>575(32)</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Numerical Distribution of English and Latin Entries in Bacon's Promus (pages 193-275) (FIG. 1)
More detailed information on the works of the main authors identified as Latin sources is shown in Table 2.

Table 2. Summary of Works of Latin Authors identified as Sources of Promus Entries (with duplicates in parentheses)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Author</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Number</th>
<th>Approximate % for each Author</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Virgil</td>
<td>Aeneid</td>
<td>83(6)</td>
<td>76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Eclogues</td>
<td>17</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Georgics</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>TOTAL</td>
<td>110(6)</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Horace</td>
<td>Satires</td>
<td>20(1)</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Epistles</td>
<td>15(1)</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Ars Poetica</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Odes</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Epodes</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>TOTAL</td>
<td>50(2)</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ovid</td>
<td>Heroides</td>
<td>20</td>
<td>32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Metamorphoses</td>
<td>16(2)</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Ars Amatoria</td>
<td>14(2)</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Amores</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Remedia amoris</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Epistulae</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>TOTAL</td>
<td>63(4)</td>
<td>100</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The Promus contains quotations from a wide selection of the books of the Vulgate Bible, the overall distribution of which is shown in Table 3. Fewer than half are from the Old Testament, mainly from the Psalms and Proverbs, but there is nothing from the Pentateuch, and altogether only six of the 39 Books are represented. It is not intended to comment here in detail on this selection, except to remind the reader that the Writings (Psalms, Proverbs and Ecclesiastes) represent collections of poetry, drama and philosophy. Quotations from the New Testament are slightly more numerous than those of the Old, predominantly from Matthew (which has long been the most highly esteemed), and altogether 18 of the 27 Books are represented.
Table 3. Frequency with which Books of the Vulgate are identified as sources for Promus entries (with duplicates in parentheses)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Book</th>
<th>Number</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>OLD TESTAMENT</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Psalms</td>
<td>21(3)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Proverbs</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ecclesiastes</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kings (2)</td>
<td>2(1)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Samuel</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jonah</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TOTAL</td>
<td>42(4)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>NEW TESTAMENT</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Matthew</td>
<td>12(2)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Corinthians (2)</td>
<td>8(3)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>John</td>
<td>7(1)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Timothy (2)</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Acts</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hebrews</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Romans</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Philippians</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Revelations</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Titus</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Luke</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colossians</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>James</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jude</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mark</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thessalonians</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TOTAL</td>
<td>55(6)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The less often quoted Latin authors are listed in Table 4, together with the number of citations.
Table 4. Frequency of the less frequently quoted Latin authors and works as sources for Promus entries (with a duplicate in parenthesis)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Author</th>
<th>Work</th>
<th>Number of entries</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Terence</td>
<td>Heautontimorunen</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Adelphi</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Eunuchus</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Phormio</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seneca</td>
<td>Hercules Furens</td>
<td>3(1)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Hercules Octaeus</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Troades</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lucan</td>
<td>De bello civili</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Martial</td>
<td>Epigrams</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cicero</td>
<td>De oratore</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Pro Sulla</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Juvenal</td>
<td>Satires</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sallust</td>
<td>De Republica Ordinanda</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

TOTAL | 20(1)

SEQUENCE OF ENTRIES BY AUTHOR AND BY CHRONOLOGY WITHIN WORKS

In scanning through the entries attributable to a single author, the sequence of entries often appears to follow the order in the source itself at least for small groups of adjacent entries on a page or on adjacent pages. This has been shown for the English proverbs in works by John Heywood [11]. Examination for the presence and extent of such a feature has been carried out for particular works by decimalising their content (order of books or chapters or sections or pages, as the case may be, as they occur within those works) and plotting these values for all entries as they occur in sequence on adjacent lines or pages of the Promus.

ERASMUS

Entries of Erasmus’ Adages appear in 12 groups in which numbers tend to increase up to about page 242 (Fig. 2). The fact that there are these large groups, often without any admixture of other identifiable sources, suggests the extraction of passages from Erasmus, rather than from Erasmus’ sources. However, in this case, the sequence of entries within or between any of these groups in the Promus does not appear to be closely correlated with the sequence in the Adages (Fig 3). This suggests a conscious choice of particular entries, rather than a systematic search for the beginning to end, making choices on the way; indeed the adages were not meant to be read through, but dipped into, and this is what Bacon may have done. Also, the absence of a correlation may be attributable to the present comparison being made with the most up-to-date version of the Adages of the year 1536 containing 4151 adages, whereas there were many fewer in the earlier editions, starting with just 818 adages in 1500) and increasing steadily over the next 10 editions. These earlier editions, which may have been consulted by Bacon have not been examined.

The possibility that Bacon consulted secondary sources has been examined superficially with reference to works by Taverner [12] and Udall [13]. Taverner seems an unlikely source because he includes scarcely two dozen entries noted by Bacon, and those few do not occur in the same order as in the Promus. The situation with Udall’s translations is similar. No other possible alternative sources have, as yet, been sought.

Another approach, however, has been to note the sources given by Erasmus for some of the adages found in the Promus and seek common
Twelve Sequences of Quotations from Erasmus’ Adages in Bacon’s Promus (pages 195-243) (FIG. 3)

Numerical Distribution of Quotations from The Aeneid in Bacon’s Promus (pages 194-265) (FIG. 4)
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Nine Sequences of Quotations from Virgil’s Aeneid in Bacon’s Promus (pages 194-265) (FIG. 5)

![Graph showing sequential entries on adjacent pages from Aeneid Volume Number 1 to 13.]

Sequential Entries on Adjacent Pages

Numerical Distribution of Entries from the Old and New Testaments in Bacon’s Promus (pages 193-275) (FIG. 6)

![Graph showing numerical distribution of entries with Promus Page Number from 200 to 260.]

Number per Page

NEW - Upper OLD - Lower sources for adjacent entries. This has been accomplished in a preliminary way by using the translations and annotations in the Collected Works of Erasmus published by the University of Toronto {22 & 23} which cover the first 1600 adages only. For this exercise account has also been taken of entries in English and Greek that can be traced to Erasmus. The results indicate that the majority of adjacent entries found do not share a single source whilst a few entries have no source other than Erasmus himself. Thus, this preliminary analysis suggests that Erasmus is generally the prime source, but clearly it would be desirable to extend the search to a more complete sample.

VIRGIL

The entries of Virgil’s Aeneid are also present in several distinct groups in the Promus, the largest of which tend to occur towards the later pages (Fig. 4) and three of which (Nos. 5-7 in Fig. 5) show a marked tendency to occur in the same order as in the Aeneid.

Quotations found from the Eclogues show much more scatter than those from the Aeneid, although the last group (on page 245) does show a tendency to synchronise with the order in the Eclogues itself.

Quotations from the Georgics (which do not include any from Book 4) are also few, and scattered more or less at random.

THE VULGATE

Most of the entries identified from the Bible occur up to page 216, although there is also a substantial group from the Old Testament on pages 251 and 252 (Fig 6). To illustrate the sequence of occurrence, the six Books concerned in the Old Testament have been numbered in the order in which they occur in the Bible (1 to 6) and the chapters quoted expressed as a decimal fraction of the total available in each book. The New Testament is slightly different because all but eight of 27 Books are quoted; in this case all the Books available have been numbered (1 to 27) and again the chapters quoted from these Books have been expressed as a decimal fraction of those available.

These figures have then been plotted in sequence as in Fig. 7 for those from the Old Testament (with the six Books identified in the figure) and in Fig. 8 for those from the New Testament, with separate identification of the entries for Matthew (the most numerous), Corinthians, Timothy and Acts. In both graphs the pages on which they occur have been indicated.
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Sequences of Old Testament Entries in the Promus
(FIG. 7)

Decimalised Order of Books

Promus Page Number

Sequences of New Testament Entries in the Promus
(FIG. 8)

Decimalised Order of Books

Promus Page Number
For both the Old and New Testaments the sequences of entries in the Promus tend to follow those of the works themselves, both between Books and between chapters within Books. This suggests a systematic search for items to extract (or a very good memory).

HORACE

The distribution in the Promus of quotation from the Satires is shown in Fig. 9. Several pages contain only a single entry, but most occur on pages 245 to 247 and are in the same order strictly as in Horace. There are fewer entries from Horace’s Epistles and they appear not to be in any organised order, even in the few cases when three are present on a single page. Most of the entries for the Ars Poetica follow strictly their order in Horace (Fig. 10). For the Odes, the four entries are all on separate pages and in no particular order.

OVID

Whilst the initial quotations from Ovid’s Heroides are scattered (Fig.11), the last group shows a strong tendency to synchronise with the source order, as is true of Ars Amatoria (Fig. 12) and Amores (Fig. 13).

Sequence of Quotations from Horace Satires I and II in the Promus (FIG. 9)
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Sequence of Quotations from Horace's Ars Poetica in the Promus (FIG. 10)

Sequence of Quotations from Ovid's Heroides in the Promus (FIG. 11)
BACONIANA
Sequence of Quotations from Ovid’s Ars Amatoria in the Promus (FIG. 12)

Sequence of Quotations from Ovid’s Amores in the Promus (FIG. 13)

70
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Numerical Distribution of Unattributable Latin Entries in Bacon's Promus (pages 193-275) (FIG. 14)

Those from Metamorphoses, however, are much more scattered, as are the few entries from Remedia Amoris.

OTHER AUTHORS

The data from other authors, such as Terence, are too few to enable firm conclusions to be drawn.

SUMMARY OF SEQUENCES

In the case of the Adages of Erasmus, the Eclogues and Georgics of Virgil or the Epistles of Horace, there is no evidence for the quotations in the Promus to follow the order in the original works. Such evidence is found, however, with the Aeneid of Virgil, the Books of the Old and New Testaments of the Vulgate, the Satires and Ars Poetica of Horace, and the Heroides, Ars Amatoria and Amores of Ovid. For other works the evidence is inconclusive.

Spedding inferred, from the fact that many of the quotations are slightly inaccurate, that Bacon set many of the entries down from memory, 'reviewing in memory the book he had last read', although he also points out that Bacon often makes slightly inaccurate quotations intentionally to bring out a new meaning of his own (3). However, Bacon's only occasional slight inaccuracy can be seen by checking John Warrington’s glossary of quotations in the Advancement of Learning [18]; only about 5% appear to be in error.

UNIDENTIFIED ENTRIES

The distribution of unattributed entries is shown in Fig. 14: there is an increase in frequency towards the end of the Promus.

Bartholomew has drawn attention to the English entry, ‘colors of good and euill’ (275,10), as well as to the occurrence in the Promus of three expressions which are central to the argument of the work that bears that title: ‘In deliberatives and electives’ (262,1); ‘fallaxes’ (264,1), with ‘Fall.’ (268,13); and ‘Semblances or popularities of good and euill’ (274,1). Between 260.1 and the end of the Promus a large number of the Latin entries take the form of two contrasted moral propositions: this is the form in which Bacon casts the ‘colours’ which are discussed and modified in the ‘Colours of good and evil’, and which appear as section headings in that work. In fact, of the ten ‘colours’ Bacon used in the later work, seven appear in the Promus (although they have not been repeated verbatim). These are: I. = 265,21; II. = 266,1; III. = 261,8; IV. = 266,9; V. = 260,23; VI. = 266,18; and X. = 269,2.

Bartholomew also points out that two passages in this part of the Promus are insertions. The first comprises all the entries on page 263, which have hope and fear as their theme, and form the foundation of part of Bacon’s Meditationes sacrae. The other entries occupy pages 270-273 (‘Verba ... ad gratiam sparsam’, 270.2 and 273,11). But if these passages are discounted, the final part of the Promus may be regarded as a preliminary sketch for the ‘Colours of good and evil’. The Latin entries in the Promus which were not adopted for ‘Colours’ greatly outnumber those which Bacon finally used: perhaps he began by drawing up an extensive list from which he originally intended only to make a selection; perhaps again he was proposing to write a much larger work, but failed to do so. In either case the two works should be studied together.

A number of other entries from the Promus also appear in the text of the ‘Colours of good and evil’. The most striking are the English 266.12-15, the story of two frogs considering whether to go down a deep well during a drought, which is quoted in ‘Colour’. Section IV, with a reference to its source (Aesop); and 265. 23-24, which, in English, and in less opaque terms, forms the subject of Section I. Section VII contains Bacon’s definition of his own term ‘antiperistasis’ (193,5). The English
This passage is of interest in being a negative version of the Latin proverb, an inversion often made by Bacon. The proverb is listed by Tilley [10] (his No. S608) as being found only in Don Quixote, Marlowe (1599) and Antony & Cleopatra iii, 12.

MATCH OF A LATIN PROMUS ENTRY WITH LATIN IN DON QUIXOTE

There is a scattering of Latin in the text of Don Quixote, one sentence of which has been found to match exactly a Latin entry in the Promus. It is on page 316 of Volume I, as a footnote:

Casta est quam nemo rogavit ('she is chaste whom no one has solicited').

This is a quotation from Ovid (Amores I, 8.43), also found verbatim on page 249, line 26 of the Promus. It relates to the passage in Don Quixote on page 316 of Volume I):

'A woman is of no more worth or virtue than that which is in her, after she hath been solicited; and that she alone is strong who cannot be bowed by the promises, gifts ... of importunate lovers'.

This passage is of interest in being a negative version of the Latin proverb, an inversion often made by Bacon. The proverb is listed by Tilley [10] (his No. S608) as being found only in Don Quixote, Marlowe (1599) and Antony & Cleopatra iii, 12.

MATCHES OF ENGLISH TRANSLATIONS OF LATIN PROMUS ENTRIES WITH THE ENGLISH IN DON QUIXOTE

Page reference of matches

The page references to the matches that have been found between the English translations of the Latin entries in the Promus and the English text of Don Quixote are summarised in Table 5. Altogether 46 matches have been found, plus six duplicates in the Promus (including one in English), nine duplicates in Don Quixote, seven entries in the Promus that are similar to the text of Don Quixote and one entry that has the opposite meaning to that in the text. Again, other matches could, no doubt be construed, especially where the Latin entries are somewhat similar to those in English and Spanish already described [1].

Table 5: Summary of matches of English translations of Latin Promus entries and the English text in Don Quixote.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Text in Don Quixote</th>
<th>Matching entry in Promus</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Volume</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>xv</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>2-4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>162</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>150</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>162</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>164</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>248</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>261</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>316</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>319</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>340</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>353-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>353-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>206</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>31</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>84</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>141</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Text in Don Quixote</th>
<th>Starting Line</th>
<th>Matching entry in Promus</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Volume Page</td>
<td>Line</td>
<td>Page</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 141 &amp; 144</td>
<td>36 &amp; 4</td>
<td>207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 145</td>
<td>13-30</td>
<td>214</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 151</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>208</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 160</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>249</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 185</td>
<td>12</td>
<td>196</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 185</td>
<td>23</td>
<td>197</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 291</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>Many classical entries</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 219</td>
<td>28</td>
<td>249</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 303</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>234</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 314</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 334</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>249</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 357</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>268</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II 362</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>197</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III 36</td>
<td>35</td>
<td>199</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III 41</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>228</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III 98</td>
<td>penultimate</td>
<td>267</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III 109</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>241</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III 110</td>
<td>36</td>
<td>271</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III iii</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>195</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III 313</td>
<td>penultimate</td>
<td>220</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III 169</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>195</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III 285</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>220</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III 335</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>255</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td></td>
<td>255</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td></td>
<td>244</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td></td>
<td>196</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I 1</td>
<td></td>
<td>208</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Textual details of matches

These matches are now given in more detail (although leaving out the Latin texts, which appear in full in the Appendix) and are discussed further, different quotations from Don Quixote relating to a single entry in the Promus being considered together, as well as identical or similar entries in the Promus being grouped together:

Vol. I, p. xv, line 24, ‘But I, though in show a father, yet in truth but a step-father to Don Quixote’
BACONIANA

Cf. Promus, p. 230, line 4, 'If you were not my father'. The question naturally stimulated by this entry is, 'then who is my father?' Similarly, the question provoked by the statement on the first page of the Author's Preface to Don Quixote is, 'then who is the father of this work?'. This question has been natural to those like Durning-Lawrence and Hutchinson who first doubted Cervantes' authorship of Don Quixote 19.

Vol. I, pp. 2-4, line 12, 'this gentleman above named [Don Quixote who] . . . did apply himself wholly to the reading of books of knighthood . . . grew distracted and was breaking his brains day and night . . . [p. 3] . . . he plunged himself so deeply in his reading of these books . . . through little sleep and much reading he dried up his brains in such sort as he wholly lost his judgement. His . . . [p. 4] . . . wit being wholly extinguished . . . madman . . .'.

Cf. Promus, p. 208, line 1, 'Much learning reduces you to madness'.

It is of interest that here, at the very beginning of Don Quixote there should be such a clear match with the Promus. Two further allusions to the proverb occur, one in the middle and the other at the end of the novel. These are in:

1) Vol. II, p. 151, line 13, 'Gentlemen, is it possible that the idle and unsavoury lecture [reading] of books of knighthood hath so much distracted your wit . . .' and

2) Vol. III, p. 335, line 2, 'I possess now a free and clear judgement, and nothing overshadowed with the misty clouds of ignorance, which the continual reading and plodding on books of chivalry had overcast me withal'.

Vol. I, p. 23, penultimate line, 'every one is son of his works'.

Cf. Promus, p. 196, line 10, 'Each of us endures his own fate in the after-life'.

Also cf. Promus, p. 248, line 24 (duplicate).

Also cf. Promus, p. 212, line 8, 'Each man is the architect of his own fortune'.

A similar text is:

1) Vol. II, p. 10, line 13, 'I was the builder and contriver of mine own dishonour'.

An identical text is:

2) Vol. II, p. 136, line 14, 'everyone is the son of his own works'.

76
Other similar texts are:

3) Vol. II, p. 185, line 12, ‘let his own rod whip him; as he hath brewed, so let him bake’ and

4) Vol. III, p. 285, line 15, ‘every man is the artificer of his own fortune.

Although it is not intended in the present study to list all the occurrences of any matches in other works, in this particular case, in which the theme is repeatedly found, it can be noted that Bacon also uses it:

1) in his essay ‘Of Fortune’, ‘the Mould of a Man’s Fortune is in his owne hands’ (14)

2) later (1609) in his Wisdom of the Ancients, XXVII, ‘Sphynx, or Science’ as, ‘every artificer also commands over his work’ (17), and finally,

3) in ‘Rhetorical Sophisms’ in The Advancement of Learning (1605;
I.vi.3) in reverse form as, ‘You shall not be your own carver’ {3}.

Vol. I, p. 150, line 19, ‘If thou tellest thy tale, Sancho, after that manner ... repeating everything twice ... ; tell it succintly, and like one of judgement, or else say nothing’.

Cf. Promus, p. 247, line 29, ‘Nothing is so good that it cannot be distorted by being narrated badly’.

Vol. I, p. 162, line 23, ‘for something is better than nothing’.

Cf. Promus, p. 244, line 4, ‘That thing will be very little, but more than nothing’.

Also Cf. Promus, p. 240, line 15 (in English), ‘Some what is better then [sic] nothing’.

A similar text is: Vol. III, p. 169, line 18, ‘but something is better than nothing’.

Vol. I, p. 164, line 29, ‘and be brief in thy reasons; for none is delightful if it be prolix’.

Cf. Promus, p. 228, line 19, ‘Brevidy of Speech’.

Vol. I, p. 248, line 34, ‘sudden death finisheth presently the pain; but that which doth lingeringly torment, kills always, without ending the life’.

Cf. Promus, p. 269, line 2. ‘The step of deprivation appears greater than the process of gradual loss’, but that is not actually the case.

Vol. I, p. 261, line 8, ‘the traitor caused tears to give credit to his words and sighs to give countenance to his intention'.

Cf. Promus, p. 249, line 4, 'We have placed trust in your tears; or are even tears taught how to pretend? Do tears too have stratagems, and issue forth to where they are told to go?'.

Vol. I, p. 316, line 7, 'it may give manifest argument of the degree of her goodness, as the fire doth show the value of gold'.

Cf. Promus, p. 193, line 20, 'And the fire will show the true nature of every man's work'.

An alternative match would be 'Fire tests gold: adversity [tests] strong men' from Seneca's 'De Providentia', ('ignis aurum probat, miseria fortis viros') [19].

Vol. I, p. 319, line 6, 'If from two equal parts we take away two parts equal, the parts that remain are also equal'.

Cf. Promus, p. 261, line 14, 'If one of two things is linked to a third of equal weight, it renders itself the greater of the two'.

Here, it is the general subject matter, rather than a close similarity of meaning which matches.

Vol. I, p. 340, line 10, 'he who gives quickly, gives twice'.

Cf. Promus, p. 243, line 2, 'He who gives quickly, gives twice'.

Vol. I, p. 353-5, penultimate line, 'Camilla answered [her maid, Leonela] that ... they must study some device to cloak the occasion of her [self-inflicted] hurt from Anselmo [her husband, who was listening, concealed, and being deceived by Camilla] ... [p. 355, line 20]. The fraud rested unknown a while, until ... the wickedness that was so artificially cloaked issued to the public notice of the world;'.

Cf. Promus, p. 194, line 8, 'with this word she cloaks her sin';

Also cf. Promus 206, 12, (duplicate).

Vol. II, p. 5, line 22, 'if the head could not now be found, it was by reason that the house were guided by enchantment'. Subsequent references to enchantment abound in the whole text, as well as, for example in the chapter headings on pp. 120, 129 and 246 in this volume and on pp. 21, 60, 67 and 254 of Vol. III'.

Cf. Promus, p. 228, line 20, 'to use every kind of saving (from enchantments)'.
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

Vol. II. p. 17, line 28. ‘having first taken notice of him by his voice, and confirmed it again by her sight’.

Cf. Promus, p. 247, line 26, ‘“What madness is this”, she said, “to prefer those of whom you have heard to those you have seen”’.

Vol. II. p. 31. line 6, ‘this art and exercise excelleth all others . . .; and it is the more to be priz’d, by how much it exposeth itself, more than other trades, to dangers and inconveniences’.

Cf. Promus, p. 266, line 7, ‘A matter in which it is more dangerous to err is better than that in which error takes place with less danger’. Also, cf. similar entries:

Promus, p. 266, line 26, ‘A thing which has competitors, and for which men contend, is good; a thing for which there is no contention is bad’.

Promus, p. 267, line 9, ‘What is possible and easy to do is good: what can be done without exertion and in a short space of time is, on the other hand, bad’.

Also cf., for the opposite sense.

Promus, p. 266, line 22, ‘A thing in which error scarcely takes place is better than that in which error is liable to occur’.

Vol. II. p. 36. line 30, ‘their [the soldiers’] death, valour and boldness which is the greatest that may be found among all the trances of warfare’.

Cf. Promus, p. 248, line 2, ‘And I realise how fine a thing it is to die in arms’.

Also cf. Promus, p. 212, line 22, ‘And war, useful for many purposes’.

Also cf. Promus, p. 208, line 23, ‘War is the father of all things’.

Vol. II. p. 85. line 5, ‘And so great is the delight we have taken in the hearing [of the tale of the Captive] thereof, as I do believe that although we have spent the time from hence till tomorrow in listening to it, yet should we be glad to hear it told over once again’.

Cf. Promus, p. 247, line 23, ‘This one has given pleasure once: this other one will always please, though summoned back ten times’.

Vol. II. p. 141. line 32, ‘so wedded to their opinion, as no reason can woo nor demonstration win them from it’.

Cf. Promus, p. 193, line 11, ‘The fool does not accept the words of prudence unless you have said those things which already dwell in his heart’.

79
Vol. II, p. 141, line 36, ‘three tragedies, written by a famous poet of our kingdom, which were such as delighted, yea, amazed all the auditors, as well the learned as the simple’; and
Vol. II, p. 144, line 4, ‘the auditor having heard an artificial and well-ordered comedy, would come away delighted with the jests and instructed by the truths thereof... grow discreeter by the reasons, warned by the deceits, become wiser by others example, incensed against vice, and enamoured of virtue’.

Cf. Promus, p. 219, line 13, ‘Tragedy and comedy are formed from the same letters’.

The entry on the next line on the same page is ‘Tragedies and Comedies are made of one Alphabet’. This closely matches ‘Those works of the Alphabet’ Bacon refers to in seeking Sir Tobie Matthew’s criticism of his writing, saying, ‘I value your own reading more than your publishing them to others’ [3].

Vol. II, p. 145, lines 13-30, ‘good comedies... to, viz. entertainment of the people... enriching our language... for the honest recreation not only of the idler sort but also of those that have more serious occupations... nor can our human and frail nature sustain itself long without some help of lawful recreation’.

This would have been written between 5 December, 1594 and 27 January, 1595, but Bacon had expressed a similar thought to Thomas Phelipps when inviting him to Twickenham in August 1592, ‘Otia coligit mentem’ [‘Leisure restores the mind’] [16]. In this context, mention must be made of the English entry (252,18), ‘Ye. law at Twicknam for mery tales’.

Vol. II, p. 160, line 13, ‘administration of justic... deal justly and determine rightly... if wanting... our means and ends will always be subject to errors and therefore is God wont as well to further the good signs of the simple’

Cf. Promus, p. 249, line 7, ‘simplicity was worthy of esteem’.

Vol. II, p. 185, line 23, ‘A soldier had rather be dead in the battle than free by running away’

Cf. Promus, p. 197, lines 4-5, ‘To die for one’s fatherland is a sweet and fitting thing; if a man runs away, death overtakes him too.'
A similar text: Vol. II, p. 356, line 7, 'as Terence says, a soldier slain in the field shows better than alive and safe in flight'.

Vol. II, p. 219, line 28, 'and 'tis good marrying her with this her equal'.
Cf. Promus, p. 249, line 12, 'It is not an honour but a burden . . . ; should you wish to marry rightly, marry an equal'.

A similar text: Vol. II, p. 314, line 4, 'There's my wife now . . . that would have every one marry with their equals, holding herself to the proverb that says, "Like to like, quoth the devil to the collier"'.

Vol. II, p. 291, line 3, 'All the day long he [a poet] spends in his criticism . . . whether Martial were bawdy or no in such an epigram, whether such or such a verse in Virgil ought to be understood this way or that. Indeed, all his delight is in these aforesaid poets, and in Horace, Persius, Juvenal, and Tibullus'.
Cf. the many references in the Promus to Virgil and Horace, as well as two to Martial (not bawdy, and one duplicated) and one to Juvenal.
In similar vein: Vol. II, p. 293, line 'if he makes Sermones, like those of Horace, to the reprehension of vice in general, as he so elegantly did, then cherish him'.

Vol. II, p. 303, line 14, 'if the statutes and ordinances of knight-errantry were lost, they might be found in your breast, as in their own storehouse and register'.
Cf. Promus, p. 234, line 4, 'a distributor, rather than a hoarder [of stored riches]!' and 'I am putting by and setting in order the stores on which I may someday draw' (Loeb translation).
Also cf. Promus, p. 199, line 1, 'a distributor'.
Also cf. Promus, p. 250, lines 1-2, 'A late distributor of formularies and elegancies'.
Also cf. Promus, p. 258, title, 'Formularies Store 27 Jan, 1595'.

Vol. II, p. 334, line 7, 'They cannot be called deceits,' quoth Don Quixote, 'that are done to a virtuous end . . .'.
Cf. Promus, p. 268, line 14, 'the aim, not the end'.

Vol. III, p. 36, line 35, 'speak what thou [Sancho] wilt, so thou speak quickly'.
Cf. Promus, p. 228, line 19, 'Brevity of speech'.

81
Vol. III, p. 41, line 2, ‘If your knights, your gallants, or gentlemen should have called me coxcombe, I should have held it for an affront irreparable; but that your poor scholars account me a madman . . . I care not a trip’.

Cf. Promus, p. 267, line 3, ‘Something which even enemies and the ill-disposed praise is exceedingly good; something with which even friends find fault is a great evil’.

Vol. III, p. 98, penultimate line, ‘. . . the beginning of a business is half the ending of it’

Cf. Promus, p. 241, line 16, ‘The commencement is half of the whole enterprise’.

Vol. III, p. 109, line 4, ‘thou must consider who thou art, and know thyself, which is the hardest kind of knowledge that may be imagined’.

Cf. Promus, p. 271, line 2b, ‘Know thyself’.

Vol. III, p. 110, line 36, ‘Him that thou must punish with deeds, revile not with words, since to a wretch the punishment is sufficient, without adding ill language’ [followed by a footnote]: ‘A good item to our judges of the common law’; this must be a reference to Edward Coke who supported the English Common Law whereas Bacon advocated Equity.

Cf. Promus, p. 195, line 17, ‘Censure gives pardon to the ravens, but harasses the doves’.

Vol. III, p. 111, line 5, ‘God’s . . . mercy is more precious and more eminent than His justice’.

Cf. Promus, p. 195, line 16, ‘Justice itself is an insignificant thing’.

It will be noticed that this and the preceding entry in the Promus are on adjacent lines whilst the corresponding match in Don Quixote are in the same paragraph (on adjacent pages).

Vol. III, p. 313, penultimate line, ‘Let thy sleep be moderate: for he that riseth not with the sun loseth the day’.

Cf. Promus, p. 255, line 14, ‘Rise early in the morning, my boy, but do not rise vainly’.

Also cf. Promus, p. 255, line 13, ‘It is very healthy to rise at daybreak’.
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

The foregoing list should not be taken as complete because, in practice, further matches become evident on each new reading of the text.

SELECTION OF AVAILABLE PROMUS ENTRIES

Examination of the matches between the text of Don Quixote and the Promus entries shows that the selection found in Don Quixote is, in some respects similar to that available in the Promus. Thus, there is a similar percentage of what appear to be Bacon’s own inventions in both groups (29 and 31%, respectively) whilst, of the identifiable quotations, those from Erasmus are predominant in both, comprising 38 and 41% of the respective totals, those from Virgil’s Aeneid comprise 10 and 14%, respectively, and those from the Vulgate 11 and 17%, respectively. However, those from Ovid (Heroides) and the Vulgate are relatively more numerous in Don Quixote, as are the remainder, although they consist of only single quotations — from Proverbs, Acts, I Corinthians, Sallust, Terence (Phormis), Ovid’s Metamorpheses, Lucan, Horace, (Odes and Ars Poetica) and Juvenal.

The broad similarity described above is sufficient to support the theory that Bacon was behind both sets of quotations.

MATCHES BETWEEN THE PROMUS AND WORKS UNDER BACON’S NAME

Both Pott [3] and Carr [2] have listed a number of English entries in the Promus that are matched by Bacon’s writing under the name of Shakespeare. It is of interest to recall that matching entries can also be found in writings under his own name, as has already been pointed out. A thorough account is not offered here, but a few finds are given in Table 6 simply as further examples to reinforce the fact that the Latin entries were so used, with the likelihood that they had been collected with such later use in mind. This latter conclusion is strengthened, as already pointed out, by the translation of ‘Promus’ (entry 234,4) as ‘a distributor, rather than a hoarder’.

83
Table 6: A few examples of English and Latin entries in the Promus matched with other writings (5) under Bacon's name

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Promus Page</th>
<th>Translation of Latin Entry (see Appendix)</th>
<th>Entry</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>193</td>
<td>The fool does not accept the words of prudence unless you have said those things which already dwell within his heart</td>
<td>For what a man had rather were true he more readily believes (Novum Organum, Aphor, xxxix. trans. Spedding; also in Don Quixote, loc. cit.) (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>207</td>
<td>Virtue like a rych gene best plaine set</td>
<td>Virtue is like a rich stone, best plain set (Essays, 43. Of Beauty)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>199</td>
<td>Stay a littell that we make an end the sooner</td>
<td>I knew a wise man that had it for a by-word, when he saw men hasten to a conclusion, 'Stay a little, that we may make an end the sooner. (Essays, 25. Of Dispatch)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>202</td>
<td>Sometymes a stander by seeth more than a plaier T.</td>
<td>Lookers-on many times see more than the gamesters. (Essays, 48. Of Followers and Friends; also in Don Quixote {1})</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>211</td>
<td>To gyve Awhors thear due as you gyue Tyme his dew wch is to discouuer troth</td>
<td>The inseparable propriety of time, which is ever more and more to disclose truth. (Advancement of Learning, 1605. Bk. II, xxiii. 49)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>215</td>
<td>Be it better be it worse</td>
<td>Diogenes said of a young man that danced daintily and was much commended: 'The better, the worse' (Apothegms, 266; also in Don Quixote {1})</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>217</td>
<td>No man loueth his fetters though they be of gold</td>
<td>Why should a man be in love with his fetters, though of gold. (An Essay on Death, para. 1)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>220</td>
<td>It is in action as it is in wayes; comonly the nearest is the fowlest</td>
<td>It is in life as it is in ways, the shortest way is commonly the foulest (Advancement of Learning, 1605, Bk. II, xxiii 45) (as above)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>258</td>
<td>In actions as in wayes the nearest ye. fowlest //</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Attention must also be drawn to entry 196,7, ‘Et moniti melora sequa-nur’, a completed version of one of Bacon’s mottos, ‘moniti meliora’ (‘being instructed to better things’) which, read in conjunction with the title of Emblem No. 45 in Whitney’s ‘A choice of Emblems’. 1586, ‘In dies meliora’ becomes, ‘Moniti in dies melior gate sequamur’ (‘Let us, being instructed, strive after better [i.e. Golden] days’) [9].

MATCHES ELSEWHERE BETWEEN PROMUS LATIN ENTRIES
AND DON QUIXOTE

Pott found many matches between the Promus and works of Shakespeare. Her results show that all the matches found in the present study between the Latin entries and Don Quixote have also been found in Shakespeare. She also searched some 6000 works of other contemporary authors (plays, poems, tales, tracts, dialogues, letters, sermons and treatises) and found only a handful of matches with the Promus [3].

SUBJECT MATTER OF MATCHES IN DON QUIXOTE – ONE EXAMPLE. THE LAW

Although it is not the intention here to deal comprehensively with all the subject matter of the matches found, it is worth exploring some of the parallels to be found in other writings of Bacon and in his life, taking just one subject as an example, namely, the law and the administration of justice.

This is particularly relevant as it is clear from the text of Don Quixote that the novel is largely autobiographical: on the penultimate page, for example, the author, ‘the wise and prudent Cid Hamet Benegeli’, says that ‘Don Quixote was born for me alone, and I had my birth only for him. . . To be short, he and I are but one selfsame thing’; and elsewhere there are innumerable references to facts opposite to Bacon’s own circumstances, a topic worthy of further exploration elsewhere. It should also be noted that the autobiographical content applies also to Sancho Panza, who says of his master, ‘I am his other self’ (Vol. III, p. 42), as well as applying to other characters in the book.

Importance of Law

In Volume II, p. 31, there is the remarkable statement by Don Quixote during one of his periodic episodes of seriousness that, ‘The end and conclusion of learning is . . . to maintain distributive justice in his perfection [and] . . . to endeavour and cause good laws to be religiously observed’. He returns to the subject expansively when first advising Sancho Panza on government (as already shown by the quotation from page 160 concerning the administration of justice; ‘In that is required a sufficiency and ability to govern, and above all, a good intention to deal justly and determine rightly; for if this be wanting when we begin, our means and ends will always be subject to error’). His final words of advice come in Volume III, when Sancho is unexpectedly given governorship of an island; they cover pages 108 to 111 (from the last two of which, passages have already been noted as matching two Promus entries), and continue again on pages 178 and 179.

Bribery

Don Quixote, when considering the possibility of Sancho Panza taking on the responsibilities of government says (page 50), ‘My [first] counsel should be to him that neither bribe he take nor his due forsake’ and later, his first reaction to Sancho actually being given the governorship (on page 108) is to remark on Sancho’s good luck compared with ‘Others [who] bribe, importune, solicit, rise early, entreat, grow obstinate, and obtain not what they sue for’. Again, he advises (on page 100), ‘If thou chance to be a widower . . . take not such a one as may serve thee for a bait . . . to take bribes’ and again, ‘If thou slacken justice, let it not be with the weight of a bribe, but with the weight of pity’. This emphasis against bribery is found again when Sancho’s wife sends some acorns to the Duchess, pointing out that they are not a bribe, and also when Sancho himself writes to Don Quixote (page 181), reporting. ‘Hitherto I have neither had my due, nor taken bribes and I know not the reason: for here they tell me that the governors that used to come to this island, before they come, they of the town either give or lend them a good sum of money. And this is the ordinary custom, not only in this town, but in many others also’. This was certainly true of England at the time. Finally, Sancho, reporting on his experience as a governor says (p. 209) ‘. . . neither have I had leisure to take bribes’.

The subject crops up once more in a separate context when the reformed bandit Ricote was to be reinstated (Vol. III, page 283): ‘“There is no trust in favours and bribes” said Ricot . . . neither bribes . . . or compassion can prevail!”’.

Bacon’s awareness of the problem is evident in his essay, ‘Of Judicature’ {14} in which he says that ‘Neither can Justice yeeld her
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

Fruit with Sweetnesse amongst the Briars and Brambles of Catching and Poling Clerkes and Ministers’; he points out that one of the four ‘bad Instruments’ of the courts, ‘is the Poler and Exacter of Fees: which justifies the Common Resemblance of the Courts of Justice to the Bush, whereunto while the Sheepe flies for defence in Wether, hee is sure to loose Part of his Fleece’. (This is also rather reminiscent of the phrase found in Don Quixote (Vol. I, p. 43 and Vol. III, p. 293), ‘how many there go to seek for wool that return again shorn themselves’).

Congruent with this strong moral message is Bacon’s remarkably clean record in this regard. For example, when, late in 1595 he agreed to accept Essex’s gift of land at Twickenham, he was at pains to tell him, ‘I can be no more yours that I was’ [16]. And, of course, his unjust vilification by Macaulay and his followers for bribery as a judge has, at last been thoroughly refuted by Nieves Mathews [15].

His concern with the evil of bribery may also explain one of the rather cryptic entries in the Promus, ‘Dorica musa’ (234, 29) which was twisted by Aristophanes into ‘dorodokisti’ meaning ‘by bribery’ [3].

Moderation

On page 109 Don Quixote urges Sancho, ‘always strive to be held mean [i.e. moderate] and virtuous rather than proud and vicious’ and later, ‘follow virtue for your mean’. This emphasis on moderation in all things is to be found throughout the book, matching one of the English entries [1]. Thus, on page 179 we find, ‘Be not always cruel, nor always merciful: choose a mean betwixt these two extremes’. And, in briefly interpreting the fable of ‘Scylla and Icarus, or the Middle Way’, Bacon states that the ‘middle-way is most to be commended in moral actions . . . in political employments [it is] to be used with great heed and judgement’ and again, ‘the way of virtue lies in a direct path between excess and defect’ [17]. No wonder he was recognised as ‘the meanest [i.e. most moderate] of mankind’ [15].

Equity

Don Quixote continues to advise Sancho: ‘Never pronounce judgments rash or willfully, which is very frequent with ignorant judges, that presume to be skilful’; ‘Let the tears of the poor find more compassion (but not more justice) than the information of the rich’; ‘Seek as well to discover the truth from out of the promises and corruptions of the rich as the sobs and importunities of the poor’; ‘When equity is to take place, lay not all the rigours of the law upon the delinquent: for the fame of the rigorous judge is not better than of the compassionate’: ‘When thou happenest to judge thine enemy’s case, forget thy injury, and respect equity’.

The rebuke to ‘judges of the common law’ about the use of ill language has already been noted in the match on page 110 of Don Quixote as being aimed at Bacon’s enemy and rival, Edward Coke who strongly favoured the Common Law.

Bacon, on the other hand felt that ‘when there appeareth on either side an High Hand, Violent Prosecution, Cunning Advantages taken, Combination, Power, Great Counsell, then is the Vertue of a Judge scene, to make inequalitie Equal’ [14].

The subject crops up again in Bacon’s ‘Wisdom of the Ancients’ when he interprets the meaning of one of the fables (XI. Orpheus, or Philosophy) ‘And therefore philosophy... by persuasion and eloquence, insinuating the love of virtue, equity, and concord in the minds of men, draws multitudes of people to a society, makes them subject to laws, obedient to government, and forgetful of their unbridled affections, whilst they give ear to precepts, and submit themselves to discipline...’ [17].

In view of this consistent and long-standing attitude, it is not surprising that when Bacon was Attorney-General he was appointed by James I to head a Commission to advise on the Chancellor’s powers in the matter of equity [21].

Mercy

In addition to the match on page 111 which shows a preference for mercy rather than justice, there is a further passage (Vol. III, page 283) in which Ricot explains how Count Salazar has cleaned up Spain, ‘for, though true it be that he mixeth justice with mercy, yet because he sees that the whole body of our nation is putrid and contaminated, he useth rather cauterising that burns it than ointment that softens it; and so with prudence, skill, diligence, and terror, he hath borne upon his strong shoulders, and brought to due execution, the weight of this great machine, our industries, tricks, sleights, and frauds, not being able to blind his watchful eyes of Argus, which wake continually; to the end that none of ours remain that, like a hidden root, may in time sprout up, and scatter venomous fruit throughout Spain’.

We should note that Bacon in his essay, ‘Of Judicature’ wrote, ‘In Causes of Life and Death, Judges ought (as farre as the law permitteth) in Justice to remember Mercy, And to Cast a Severe Eye upon the Example, but a Merciful Eye upon the Person' [14]. The theme also appears in Bacon's 'Wisdom of the Ancients', (XVIII, Diomede, or Zeal) as, 'it being the extremity of all evil when mercy is not suffered to have commerce with misery' [17].

Law Reform

Finally, Don Quixote urged Sancho (page 178), 'Make not many statute-laws: and those thou dost make, see they be good, but chiefly that they be observed and kept . . . '. Sancho followed the advice for, reporting later on his activities (p. 210) said, 'and though I thought to have made some ordinances, yet I did not, as fearing they would not be kept, which is as much as if they had never been made.'

Bacon, as early as 1584 had been appointed to a committee of lawyers from the Inns of Court to review the existing statutes for the Parliament of 1589: in December, 1588 he was among four Gray's Inn men called to identify 'unnecessary or defective statutes that might be repealed or reformed' [15]; in the 1593 Parliament he urged for the reduction in the number of statutes [16] and although he had spoken of the need for law reform against the expressed wishes of the Queen, in 1594 he was made one of her 'Learned Counsel', a legal advisory body [16]: in 1597 he seconded a motion 'for abridging and reforming the excessive number of superfluous and burdensome penal laws [15]; and later he developed this theme in his 'Proposition Touching the Amendment of the Law (1616) [16]. Clearly he felt strongly on the subject and was much involved at about the time when Don Quixote was being written.

Of Dispatch

When Sancho Panza became Governor of an island, he showed a remarkable ability for wisdom when faced with a number of quite tricky cases to judge, and also reached and acted on his judgements without any delay. Faced with his first test (Vol. III, pp. 127-8) he said, 'Methinks in his suit there need be no delays, but a quick and plain judgement: my sentence therefore is . . . '. And so he continued in the same vein with several more cases, astonishing the Spanish locals who were no doubt, as Bacon had remarked in one of his essays, 'noted to be of small dispatch' [14]. In that essay, 'Of Dispatch' he stated that 'true dispatch [i.e. without undue haste] is a rich thing'. So, also Bacon, when he later became Lord keeper, and addressed those assembled in the Chancery Court outlining his approach for reform, pointed out that, 'the litigant's pulse beats swift though the Chancery pace be slow' and stressed that, 'Fresh justice is the sweetest. Justice ought not to be delayed'; subsequently he proved by his outstanding performance that his words were 'such as are fit to go before deeds' [20].

Overall theme

Don Quixote, when he encountered a group of manacled galley slaves was at pains to stress that 'here falls in justly the execution of my function. to wit. the dissolving of violence and outrages, and the succouring of the afflicted and needful' (Vol. I, page 172). Then, having heard their stories and of 'the wretched sentence of the judge, and the not executing that justice that was on your sides' of their harsh sentences, was moved to fulfil his destiny, 'to favour and assist the needful, and those that are oppressed by others more potent. But, forasmuch as I know that it is one of the parts of prudence not to do by foul means which may be accomplished by fair' (page 179), he first asks the guards to release everyone and when that fails, 'by word and deed' resorts to force (page 180). The same motives are reiterated repeatedly throughout the book when he tries at least, to right other obvious wrongs.

When Bacon finally reached the pinnacle of his career as Lord Keeper in March, 1616, he immediately set about releasing a number of imprisoned Roman Catholic priests, and then, over the next four years, set about the task of codifying, simplifying and amending the Law and dealing expeditiously and justly with a huge backlog of cases, some of 10 to 20 years standing, settling the cases of more than 35,000 suitors, none of which judgements was ever reversed [20] — such a contrast to his predecessors.

From this one example, it is clear that the mere listing of matches, as done following Table 5, and counting them up, though useful in helping to establish a connection between Don Quixote and Bacon, is of strictly limited interest. What should engage our attention are the observations, philosophy and morality of Don Quixote, viewed in the context of Bacon's life and works — a promising harvest for the future.

PAGINATION OF THE PROMUS

The general tendency for quotations from classical Latin works in the Promus to be entered in the same sequence as they occur in the works themselves can be used to confirm the correctness of some of the pagination assigned to the manuscript folios of the Promus when it was first bound together with other miscellaneous papers. Even the blocks of non-sequential quotations from Erasmus, since they are in blocks, can also be used for this purpose, although rather more tentatively. The textual links between the back of one folio with the front of the next are listed in Table 7 below. Also added are links derived from the sequence of English proverbs attributable to John Heywood [11].

Using this approach, 21 pairs of the folios that contain the Latin entries (half the total) are found to be consistently correctly numbered. Obviously this method is useless where pages are blank, as they increasingly are towards the end of the Promus, but in these cases water-marks may be useful (though they have not yet been investigated).

Table 7. Textual links between successive pages of the Promus

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Durning-Lawrence pagination</th>
<th>Manuscript folios</th>
<th>Textual link of pages</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>193</td>
<td>83</td>
<td>Aeneid VI to</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>83</td>
<td>Aeneid XI</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>84</td>
<td>II Kings 4.40 to</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>84</td>
<td>II Kings 4.40 (repeated)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>84 (Dec 5,1594)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>85</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>85</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>200</td>
<td>1</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>86</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>86</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>86</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>87</td>
<td>Anonymous to</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>87</td>
<td>Anonymous</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>88</td>
<td>Proverbs 9.7 to 12.23 etc. to</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>88</td>
<td>Matthew</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>89</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>89</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>90</td>
<td>Corinthians 2.6 to</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>90</td>
<td>Corinthians 9.25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>90</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>90</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>91</td>
<td>Horace Epistles 1. 16 to Aeneid XII. 321 to</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page</td>
<td>Start</td>
<td>End</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------</td>
<td>-------</td>
<td>-----</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| 7    | 92    |     | Horace Epistles II, 2
|      |       |     | Aeneid IX, 602 |
| 8    | 92    | 93  | Heywood II, ix, L2
|      |       |     | Heywood II, ix, L3 |
| 220  | 93    |     | Erasmus to
| 1    | 94    | 95  | Erasmus |
| 2    | 95    |     | Heywood I, x, C3 to
| 3    | 96    | 97  | Heywood I, xi, D3
| 4    | 97    |     | Heywood II, viii, K2 to
| 5    | 98    | 99  | Heywood II, viii, K2 v |
| 6    | 98    |     | Erasmus to
| 7    | 99    | 100 | Erasmus |
| 8    | 99    |     | Erasmus to
| 9    | 100   | 101 | Erasmus |
| 230  | 100   |     | Erasmus to
| 1    | 101   | 102 | Erasmus |
| 2    | 102   |     | Erasmus |
| 3    | 102   |     | Erasmus to
| 4    | 103   | 104 | Erasmus |
| 5    | 103   |     | Erasmus |
| 6    | 104   | 105 | Erasmus to
| 7    | 105   | 106 | Aeneid X, 501-2 to | 8    | 106   |     | Aeneid XI, 309 |
| 9    | 107   | 108 | (blank) |
| 250  | 108   |     | (blank) |
| 1    | 109   | 109 | (blank) |
| 2    | 109   |     | (blank) |
| 3    | 109c  | 109d| (blank) |
| 4    | 110   |     | (blank) |
| 5    | 110   |     | (blank) |
| 6    | 110   |     | (blank) |
| 111  | 111   |     | (blank) |
| 5    | 112   | 112 | (blank) |
| 6    | 112   |     | (blank) |
| 113  | 113   |     | (blank) |
SUMMARY AND CONCLUSIONS

(1) The Latin entries in the Promus tend to be grouped in large blocks and to alternate with those in English (which are present in slightly smaller numbers). Their assigned sources are predominantly Erasmus (Adages), Virgil and the Bible, but nine other classical authors, particularly Ovid and Horace are also represented. The most quoted works are Virgil’s Aeneid, Ovid’s Heroides and Horace’s Satires, but quotations from two dozen other works have also been found.

There is a general tendency for the quotations to appear in groups, in the same order as in the works that are quoted, especially towards the end of the Promus, and it seems likely that Bacon consulted the works themselves. A notable exception is the set from Erasmus’s Adages, but these are present in very large exclusive groups which is also suggestive of choice from the original source, albeit not in systematic chronological order. These features of the quotations enable a tentative confirmation of the pagination of the folios of the Promus which have been bound at some time with other papers.

(2) Almost a quarter of the entries are unidentified and are presumably Bacon's own invention, since some are to be found as headings in his 'Colours of Good and Evil' and in his 'Meditationes sacrae', although many others do not appear as such. This has led Philip Bartholomew (loc. cit.) to suggest that Bacon intended to write a much larger work on 'Colours of Good and Evil' but failed to do so (as is true of a number of his other works).

(3) There is a single match between one of the Latin entries with Latin text in Don Quixote, and 46 matches (including five duplicates) between English translations of the Latin entries and the English text. The selection of classical authors comprising these matches is similar to the overall distribution of these authors in the Promus as a whole; this indicates a homogeneity of taste in these two works.

These 47 matches should be considered alongside the 112 matches already reported for entries in English and the 20 matches found among those in Spanish [1], making 179 in all. They can hardly be considered as merely coincidental, for matches are also to be found between both the English and the Latin entries in the Promus and works published later by Bacon under his own name, though rarely in the works of other contemporary authors. This clearly indicates, together with the translation of the word 'promus' as 'a temporary store', that Bacon made his collection with the intention of making use of them in his later writings. It is, therefore, not altogether surprising to find some of them used in a pseudonymous work — in the present case, the English version of Don Quixote.

(4) The subject matter of the matches in Don Quixote has been almost entirely neglected in the present study, only that of the law being examined cursorily as an example. This brief examination shows a high degree of consistency between the Promus, Don Quixote, Bacon's other works and his activities as a lawyer. Other themes, such as the theatre, translation, poetry, religion, to mention just a few, invite further exploration.

(5) Alongside the present study there is other evidence presented in this Number of Baconiana linking Bacon to Don Quixote, in particular the close similarity between the Promus and Don Quixote in the selection of
AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

English proverbs from Heywood [11] and the presence of the 33-cipher and the Cid Hamet Benengeli-cipher in Don Quixote [1].

Overall, the conclusion from the evidence presented here must be that Bacon was closely involved in the writing of the English text of Don Quixote, accepting that he may well have had the help of one or more of his friends acting as his ‘good pens’. The finding of further supporting evidence of all kinds for this conclusion is bound to continue, but it should be regarded, not as an end in itself — it may already have reached the stage of over-kill — but as only one means to understand Bacon more fully. The matches revealed in the present study show his interest in many subjects apart from the law, and surely the time is ripe for some further attention to be given to the consideration of such matters in relation to Bacon’s writings (other than his Promus) and to his life in general.

REFERENCES

(12) Taverner, R. (1552) Proverbs or Adiges Gathered out of the Chiliades of Erasmus by Richard Tauener. Hereunto be also added Mimi Publiani. [British Library Shelf No. C.123.1.22]

AN ANALYSIS OF THE LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

This appendix contains the entries partially or wholly in Latin in the Promus, with the addition of English translations and references to the sources of Bacon's quotations in those cases where a source has been established. Citations of the Psalms include, in parentheses, those of the Authorised Version (A.V.).

The entries, taken from the edition of Duming-Lawrence {6}, have been listed according to his pagination, and his punctuation and square brackets have been retained. Occasional alterations have been made to the printed text; these have been inserted in square brackets marked by asterisks. The spelling adopted by Bacon has been followed in the case of English words quoted, but, with the Latin words, the letter 'u' has been replaced by 'v', as necessary. A slash-mark indicates the beginning of a new line in the printed edition, which follows the arrangement of the manuscript. The significance of 'T', 'A', 'F', '/|' and 'x', which are appended to, or precede, some entries is not clear. The entries on pages 251 and 271 in Duming-Lawrence's edition are arranged in two columns, and the line numbers of the entries from the right-hand column have therefore been distinguished by the symbol, 'b'.

The format of indentation in this Appendix is as follows:--

Page & Line of Promus

Entry (with cross-reference in square brackets to the same or similar entry in Latin on another page of the Promus)

Latin source with 'N' added in square brackets for sources not identified by Pott {3}

Translation of the Latin (with cross reference in square brackets to a similar entry in English)

Reference in square brackets to Table number in text

LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Horns against crosses
5 In circuitu ambulant impij; honest by antiperistasis. [210,10; cf. 220,5]
Psalms, 11.9. (= A.V. 12.8)
Impious men follow a route free from control; honest men advance with their progress constrained by contraries.

6 Siluj a bonis et dolor meus renovatus est. [251,26]
Psalms, 38.3. (= A.V. 39.2)
I have abstained from talking about good things and my sorrow has been renewed.

7 Credidj propter quod locutus sum. [251,24]
Psalms, 115.10. (= A.V. 116.10)
I believed; and on account of this I have spoken.

8 Memoria justi cum laudibus at impiorum nomen putrescat
Proverbs, 10.7.
The memory of a just man will be adorned with praise, but the name of the impious will rot.

10 Justitiamque omnes cupida de mente fugarunt. [215,23]
And they all banished justice from their greedy minds.

11 Non recipit stultus verba prudentiae nisi ea dixeris quae versantur in corde ejus [207,3]
Proverbs, 18.2.
The fool does not accept the words of prudence unless you have said those things which already dwell within his heart
[see Table 5]

13 Veritatem eme et noli vendere [207,6]
Proverbs, 23.23
Purchase the truth and do not sell it

14 Qui festinat ditari non er[i]*t insons
Proverbs, 28.20.
The man who hastens to become rich will not be innocent.

15 Nolite dare sanctum canibus.
Matthew, 7.6.
BACONIANA

Do not give anything holy to the dogs.

16 Qui potest capere capiat [207,15]
Matthew, 19.12.
Let the man who can accept this, accept it.

17 Quoniam Moses ad duritiam cordis vestri permissit vobis [216,1]
Matthew, 19.8.
Because Moses, on account of your hardness of heart, permitted you.

19 Obedire oportet deo magis quam hominibus
Acts. 5.29.
It behoves us to obey God more than men

20 Et uniuscujuisque opus quale sit probabit ignis
I Corinthians, 3.13.
And the fire will show the true nature of every man's work.
[see Table 5]

21 Non enim possimus aliquid adversus veritatem sed pro veritate [215,5]
II Corinthians, 13.8.
For we cannot do anything contrary to truth, but only on truth's behalf.

194 2 Quorundam hominum peccata praecedunt ad judicium quorundam sequuntur
I Timothy, 5.24.
The transgressions of some men go first to judgement; the transgressions of others follow afterwards.

4 Bonum certamen certavj.
II Timothy, 4.7.
I have fought the good fight.

5 Sat patriae priamoque datum.
Virgil, Aeneid II, 291.
Enough has been given to our fatherland, and enought to Priam..

6 Ilicet obruimur numero [213,24]
Virgil, Aeneid II, 424.
Instantly we are overwhelmed by numbers.
Latin Entries in Bacon’s Promus

7 Atque animis illabere nostris [215,11]
    Virgil, Aeneid III, 89.
    And glide into our hearts.

8 Hoc praetexit nomine culpam. [206,12]
    Virgil, Aeneid IV, 172
    With this word she cloaks her sin.
    [see Tab15 5]

9 Procul ô procul este prophani
    Virgil, Aeneid VI, 258.
    Stand far away, far away, unholy ones

10 Magnanimj heroes nati melioribus annis [215,13]
    Virgil, Aeneid VI, 649.
    Great-hearted heroes. born in better years.

1 Ille mihi ante alios fortunatusque laborum/
    Egregiusque animi qui ne quid tale videret/
    Procul et humum semel ore mortuus
    Virgil, Aeneid, XI, 416-418.
    Before all others, I regard as both happy in his labours and illustrious in spirit the man who, lest he should see any such thing, has fallen forward, dying, and has bitten the ground one final time.

4 Fors et virtus miscenlur in unum.
    Virgil, Aeneid XII, 714. [N]
    Chance and courage are mingled together.

5 Non ego naturâ nec sum tam callidus usu.
    Ovid, Heroides XX, 25. [N]
    I am not so shrewd by nature, nor am I so shrewd through experience.

6 aevo rarissima nostro simplicitas [215,14]
    Ovid, Ars amatoria I, 241-242. [N]
    Simplicity, something most unusual for this era of ours.

7 Viderit utilitas ego cepta fideliter edam.
    Ovid, Ars amatoria III, 671. [N]
    Let utility have seen for itself; I will faithfully complete what I have undertaken.

8 Prosperum et foelix scelus, virtus vocatur [216,22]
    Seneca, Hercules Furens, 251-252. [N]
A successful and lucky crime is called a virtue.

Tibi res antiquae laudis et artis
Virgil, Georgics II, 174
I dedicate to you my theme of ancient praise and art.

Invidiam placare paras virtute relict. [217,11]
Are you preparing to appease envy by abandoning virtue?

Iliacos intra muros peccatur et extra [216,21]
Horace, Epistles I, 2.16.
Sin is committed, both within the walls of Troy, and outside them.

Homo sum humanj a me nil alienum puto.
Terence, Heautontimorumenos I, 1.25.
I am a man; I consider nothing of human concern foreign to me.

Unum augurium optimum tueri patria[m]*. [212,30]
Erasmus III, 1.57. [N]
One omen is best of all: to defend one’s fatherland.

Exigua res est ipsa justitia [220,14]
Erasmus II, 1.67.
Justice itself is an insignificant thing.
[see Table 5]

Dat veniam corvis vexat censura columbas. [220,16]
[Juvenal Satires II, 63]; Erasmus III, 5.73.
Censure gives pardon to the ravens, but harasses the doves.
[see Table 5]

Homo hominj deus
Erasmus I, 1.69
Man is a god to man.

Semper virgines furiae; Cowrting a furye
Erasmus II, 9.15.
The Furies are always virgins; courting a fury.

Vultu laeditur saepe pietas. [241,22]
Erasmus IV, 9.17.
Piety is often betrayed by a man's expression.

Difficilia quae pulchra [241,26]
Erasmus II, 1.12.
The things which are honourable are difficult.

Conscientia mille testes. [243,3]
Erasmus I, 10.91.
Conscience is worth a thousand witnesses.

Summum Jus summa injuria [243,7]
Erasmus I, 10.25.
The extremity of the law is the extremity of injustice.

Nequicquam patrias tentasti lubricus artes.
Virgil, Aeneid XI, 716.
In your deceitfulness you have attempted your native tricks; but you have attempted them in vain.

Et monitj melioria sequamur [248,5]
Virgil, Aeneid III, 188.
And, once warned, let us follow the better course.
[see also text under ‘Matches between the Promus and works under Bacon’s name’]

Nusquam tuta fides [248,13]
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 373.
Nowhere is trust safe.

Discite Justitiam moniti [216,3;248,23] et non temnere divos
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 620.
Be warned; learn justice, and learn not to despise the gods.

Quisque suos patimur manes. [248,24]
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 743.
Each one of us endures his own fate in the afterlife.
[see Table 5]

Extinctus amabitur idem.
Horace, Epistles II, 1.14.[N]
This same man will be loved when dead.

Optimus ille animi vindex laedenti[a]* pectus/Vincula qui rupit dedoluitque semel.
Ovid, Remedia amoris, 293-294.
That is the best way to liberate the soul: to break the chains which wound the breast and to stop grieving, once and for all.

Quibus bonitas a genere penitus insita est/ iij iam non mali esse nolunt sed nesciunt
Those in whom goodness has been deeply implanted by birth are consequently not unwilling to be evil; rather, they do not know how to be evil.

Oeconomicae rationes publicas pervertunt.
Domestic calculations pervert public policies.

Divitiae Impedimenta virtutis; The bagage of/ vertue
Wealth is the baggage of virtue.

Habet et mors aram.
Death too has its altar.

Nemo virtuti invidiam reconciliaverit praeter mort[em]*
No one will have reconciled envy to virtue, except death.

Turpe proco ancillam sollicitare. Est autem/ virtutis ancilla laus.
It is a disgraceful thing for a suitor to solicit a handmaiden; on the other hand the handmaiden of virtue is praise.

Si suum cuique tribuendum est certè et venia/ humanitati
If each man may be granted what is due to him, then surely indulgence may also be given to humanity.

Qui dissimulat liber non est
The man who dissembles is not free.

Leve efficit jugum fortunae jugum amicitiae
The yoke of friendship makes the yoke of fortune light.

Omnis medecina Innovatio
Every remedy is an innovation.

Auribus mederi difficillimum. [251,3]
It is a very difficult thing to heal the ears.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

2 Suspitio fragilem fidem solvit fortem incendit Suspicion dissolves a fragile trust but highlights a strong one.

3 Pauca tamen suberunt priscae vestigia fraudis
   Virgil, Eclogues IV, 31.
   Yet a few traces of the ancient error will lie concealed.

4 Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori/ Mors et fugacem persequitur virum.
   Horace, Odes III, 2.13-14.
   To die for one's fatherland is a sweet and fitting thing: if a man runs away, death overtakes him too.
   [see Table 5]

6 Danda est hellebori multo pars maxima avar[is]
   Horace, Satires II, 3.82 [N]
   By far the greatest dose of the hellebore must be given to the greedy.

10 Totum est majus sua parte [cf. 198.15; cf. 212.9; cf.
   215.20] against factions and private profile
   The whole is greater than any one of its parts.

11 In medio non sistit virtus
   Virtue does not stand at the mid-point.

15 Mors in Olla poysningh {199.4; cf. 198.5}
   II Kings, 4.40.
   Death in the pot: poisonings

16 Fumos vendere. [238,9]
   Erasmus I, 3.41. [Martial, Epigrams IV, 5.7]
   To sell smoke [i.e. to make empty promises]*.

198 5 Totum est majus sua parte [cf. 198.15; cf. 212.9; cf.
   215.20] against factions and private profile
   The whole is greater than any one of its parts.

199 1 Promus
   Erasmus II, 4.73,[N]
   A distributor.
   [see Table 5]

2 Suavissima vita in [ ]* dies meliorem fierj
   The sweetest form of life is to become better day by day.

4 Mors in olla F [198,15]
   II Kings 4.40.
   Death in the pot.

24 Hercules pillars non ultrâ. T [cf. 211,4]
   The pillars of Hercules: thus far and no further.
   [see Table 5]

201 1 Tuque Invidiosa [vetustas]*. T
   Ovid, Metamorphoses, XV.234.
   And you, envious old age.

2 Licentia sumus omnes deteriores. T
   Terence, Heautontimorumenos III, 1.74
   Through unbounded licence we all become worse people.

3 Qui dat nivem sicut lanam T
   Psalms, 147.16
   He gives out snow as if it were wool.

4 Lilia agri non laborant neque nent T
   Matthew 6.28
   The lilies of the field do not toil, nor do they spin.

5 Mors omnia solvit T
   Death dissolves everything.

8 Ecce duo gladij hic. T
   Behold, two swords are here.

9 A [*] majore ad minorem. T [cf. a minore ad majorem.
   Hebrews 8.11 (from the lesser to the greater)]
   Jonah 3.5. [N]
   From the greater to the less.

10 In circuitu ambulant impij T [193,5; cf.220,5]
   Psalms 11.9. (= A.V. 12.8)
   Impious men follow a route free from control.

11 Exijt sermo inter fratres quod discipulus iste non moritur T
   John 21.23.
   The saying was spread among the brethren, that that disciple was not to die.

13 Omne majus continet in se mjunus T [cf. 268,3] 14 Sine ulla controversia quod minus est majore benedic[itur]* T
Hebrews 7.7.
Without any controversy, what is less is blessed by what is greater.

203 2 Receperunt mercedem suam. T.
Matthew 6.16.
They have received their own reward.

3 Secundum fidem vestram fiet vobis
Matthew 9.29.
It will be unto you according to the faith you have kept.

4 Ministerium meum honorificabo
Romans 11.13.
I will bestow honour upon my ministry.

204 1 Beati mortuj qui moriuntur in domino
Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.

2 Detractor portat Diabolum in linguâ T
A disparager carries the Devil on his tongue.

3 frangimur heu fatis inquit ferimurque procellâ
Virgil, Aeneid VII, 594
‘Alas’, he said, ‘we are broken by the fates and carried away by the storm.’

4 Nunc ipsa vocat res
Virgil, Aeneid IX, 320.
The matter of the moment now calls us.

5 Dij meliora pijs erroremque hostibus illum
Virgil, Georgics III, 513.
May the gods bestow a better fate upon the virtuous, and inflict such madness upon our enemies.

6 Aliquisque malo fuit usus in illo [275,7]
Ovid, Metamorphoses, II.332. [N]
And there was some benefit in that calamity.

7 Usque adeo latet utilitas [275,6]

LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS
Every larger thing contains a smaller thing within itself.

* Benedictus in Lat. scripto
BACONIANA

Ovid. Metamorphoses, VI.438. [N]
Right up to now the benefit lies hidden.

8
Et tamen arbitrium quœrit res ista duorum.
Ovid. Metamorphoses. IX.505.[N]
And yet that act requires two people’s decision.

9
Ut esse phœbi dulcius lumen solet/ Jam jam cadentis
Seneca, Troades, 1140-1141.[N]
As the light of the sun is wont to be sweeter, at that very moment when it starts to fade away.

11
Velle suum cuique est nec voto vivit uno
Erasmus I, 3.7.[N]
A man may harbour his own wishes; and he does not pass his life with only one single desire.

16
Nota res mala optima
Erasmus II, 9.85.[N]
An evil thing, once known, is best.

17
Balbus balbum rectius intelligit
Erasmus I, 9.77.
The man who stutters understands another stutterer more accurately.

20
Nec dijs nec viribus çquis
Virgil, Aeneid V, 809.
Neither the gods, nor his strength, were favourable.

21
Unum pro multiis dabitur caput
Virgil, Aeneid V, 815.
One life will be given for many.

22
Mitte hanc de pectore curam
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 85.
Banish this care from your heart.

23
Neptunus ventis implevit vela secundis [211.9]
Virgil, Aeneid VII, 23.
Neptune filled their sails with favourable winds.

26
Qui in parvis non distinguat in magnis labitur.
The man who does not discriminate in small matters, falls down on great ones.

205
3
Quod longè jactum est leviter ferit
A weapon which is thrown from afar strikes weakly.

4 Doe yow know it? Hoc solum scio quod nihil scio/ I know it? so say many Do you know it? I only know this: that I know nothing.

8 What doe yow conclude vpon that? etiam tentas
What do you conclude upon that? You are certainly trying.

9 All is one.s. Contrariorum eadem est ratio.
    All is one. The essence of opposite things is the same.

10 Repeat your reason.s. Bis ac ter pulchra.
    Erasmus I, 2.49 [Latin only]
    Repeat your reason. Beautiful things should be said two or three times.

206  9 Audistis quia dictum est antiquis
    Matthew 5.21
    You have heard this, because it has been said by men of old.

10 Secundum hominem dico
    Romans 3.5.
    I speak as a man.

11 Et qui[s] non novit talia?
    And who did not know such things?

12 Hoc praetexit nomine culpa[m]* [194,8]
    Virgil, Aeneid IV, 172.
    With this word she cloaks her sin.
    [see Table 5]

13 Et fuit in toto notissima fabula cēlo
    Ovid, Metamorphoses IV, 189.[N]
    And in the whole of heaven, the story was the best known of all.

14 Quod quidam facit
    Terence, Eunuchus 483.[N]
    A thing which a certain man does.

15 Nec nihil neque omnia sunt quae dicit
    Terence, Adelphi 141.[N]
    What he says is not nothing; but it does not tell Prudens celat scientiam stultus proclamat stultitiam

Proverbs 12.23.

The wise man conceals his knowledge; the fool proclaims his folly.

Querit derisor sapientiam nec invenit eam.

Proverbs 14.6.

The scoffer seeks wisdom and does not find it.

Non recipit stultus verba prudentiæ nisi ea dixeris quae sunt in corde ejus [193,11]
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

Proverbs 18.2.

The fool does not accept the words of prudence unless you have said those things which already dwell within his heart.

[see Table 5]

5 Lucerna Dej spiraculum hominis
Proverbs 20.27.

The lamp of God is the spirit of man.

6 Veritatem eme et noli vendere [193,13]
Proverbs 23.23

Purchase the truth and do not sell it.

7 Melior claudus in via [258,10] quam cursor extra viam.
   A lame man on the right road is better than a runner who has strayed away from it.

10 Melior est finis orationis quam principium. [cf. 266,23]
   Ecclesiastes 7.8.
   The end of a speech is better than the beginning.

11 Injtiurn verborum ejus stultitia et novissimum oris illius pura insania
   Ecclesiastes 10.13.
   The beginning of his words is folly and the latest thing to issue from his mouth pure madness.

   Ecclesiastes 12.11.
   The words of the wise are like barbs, and like nails driven in deeply.

15 Qui potest capere capiat [193,16]
   Matthew 19.12
   Let the man who can accept this, accept it.

16 Vos adoratis quod nescitis [211,14]
   John 4.22.
   You worship something which you do not know.

17 Vos nihil scitis
   [cf. John 11.49, vos nescitis quicquam (you do not know anything at all)]
   You know nothing.

18 Quod est veritas
BACONIANA

John 18.38.
What is truth?
19 Quod scripsj scripsj
John 19.22
What I have written, I have written.
20 Nolj dicere rex Judeorum sed dicens se regem Judeorum
John 19.21
Do not say ‘King of the Jews’; rather, say that he called himself ‘King of the Jews’.
22 Virj fratres liceat audacter dicere apud vos
Acts 2.29.
Men and brethren, let me speak among you without restraint.
23 Quod vult seminator hic verborum dicere
Acts 17.18
What does this juggler with words wish to say?

1 Multe te litter ad Insaniam redigunt
Much learning reduces you to madness.
[see Table 5]
2 Sapientiam loquimur inter perfectos [211.20]
I Corinthians 2.6.
We speak wisdom among those that are perfect.
3 Et Justificata est sapientia a filijs suis. [211.21]
Matthew 11.19.
And wisdom is justified by her offspring.
4 Scientia inflat charitas edificat
I Corinthians 8.1.
Knowledge inflates, but love edifies.
5 Eadem vobis scribere mihi non pigrum vobis autem necessarium
Philippians 3.1.
To write these same things to you is, for me, not tedious; but, for you, it is necessary.
7 Hoc autem dico ut nemo vos decipiat in sublimitate sermonum.
Colossians 2.4.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

Yet I say this so that no one should deceive you through the loftiness of their discourse.

9 Omnia probate quod bonum [est]* tenete
1 Thessalonians 5.21.
Appraise everything: hold on to what is good.

10 Fidelis sermo
1 Timothy 1.15; 3.1; 4.9.
A faithful saying.

11 Semper discentes et nunquam ad scientiam veritatis pervenientes
II Timothy 3.7.
Always learning and never attaining to knowledge of the truth.

13 Proprius ipsorum prophéta
Titus 1.12
Their own particular prophet.

14 Testimonium hoc verum est
Titus 1.13.
This testimony is true.

15 Tantam nubem testium.
Hebrews 12.1.
So great a cloud of witnesses.

16 Sit omnis homo velox ad audiendum tardus ad loquendum.
James 1.19.
Let every man be quick to listen and slow to speak.

18 Error novissimus pejor priore.
Matthew 27.64.
The last error is worse than what went before.

19 Quëcunque ignorant blasphemat
Jude 10.
They blaspheme about those things of which they have no knowledge.

20 Non credimus quia non legimus
We do not believe because we have not read.

21 Facile est ut quis Augustinum vincat viderit utrum veritate an clamore.
It is easy for the man who would defeat Augustine to see whether he is relying upon the truth, or upon loudness of voice.

Bellum omnium pater [cf. 212,22; cf. 248,2]
Erasmus III, 5.36.[N]
War is the father of all things.
[see Table 5]

Magna Civitas magna solitudo
Erasmus II, 4.54.[N]
A great city is a great solitude.

Tanti causas sciat illa furo[r]*is Virgil, Aeneid V, 788.
And she alone may know the cause of such great madness.

prima facie
On the first view.

Causa patet
The reason is plain.

Tamen quaere.
Yet search.

Non est apud aram Consultand[u]*m.
Erasmus III, 4.28.
It is too late to deliberate at the altar..

Eumenes litter
[untranslatable].

Sortj pater çquus utrique
Virgil, Aeneid X, 450.[N]
My father looks upon either outcome with composure.

Est quoddam prodire tenus si non datur ultrâ.
Horace, Epistles I, 1.32. [cf. 199.24]
It is something to advance thus far, though it may not be granted to advance further still.

Quem si non tenuit magnis tamen excidit ausis
Ovid, Metamorphoses II, 328. [cf. next entry]
Although he could not hold to this, the deeds in which he failed were yet deeds of great daring.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

6 Conamur tenues grandia [cf. previous entry]
   Horace, Odes I, 6.9.
   In our inadequacy, we attempt great enterprises.

7 Tentantem majora ferè praesentibus quum.
   Aspiring to greater things, but generally content with present circumstances.

8 Da facilem cursum atque audacibus annue ceptis
   Virgil, Georgics I, 40.
   Give me an easy journey and show favour to my bold enterprise.

9 Neptunus ventis implevit vela secundis [204,23]
   Virgil, Aeneid VII, 23.
   Neptune filled their sails with favourable winds.

10 Crescent illae crescetis Amores
    Virgil, Eclogues X, 54.
    They will grow; my loves, you will grow too.

11 Et quae nunc ratio est impetus ante fuit
    Ovid, Remedia amoris, 10.
    And what is now a branch of knowledge, was just impulse before.

12 Aspice venturo laetentur ut omnia seculo
    Virgil, Eclogues IV, 52.
    Behold how all things rejoice at the approach of the new era.

13 In Academijs discunt credere
   In the academies men learn to believe.

14 Vos adoratis quod nescitis [207,16]
    John 4.22.
    You worship something which you do not know.

15 Vos graeci semper pueri
    You Greeks are always boys.

16 Non canimus surdis respondent omnia sylvae
    Virgil, Eclogues X, 8.
    We do not sing to deaf ears; the woods reply to everything.

17 populus volt decipi
    The people wishes to be deceived.

20 S[ap]*ientiam loquimur inter perfectos [208,2]

115
I Corinthians 2.6.
We speak wisdom among those that are perfect.

Et Justicata est sapientia a filijs suis [208.3]
Matthew 11.19.
And wisdom is justified by her offspring.

Pretiosa in oculis domini mors sanctorum ejus
Psalms. 115.15. (= A.V. 116.15)
The death of his saints is precious in the eyes of the Lord.

Felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas.
Virgil, Georgics II. 490.
Happy is the man who has been able to learn the causes of phenomena.

Magistratus virum iudicat. [cf. next entry]
Erasmus I. 10.76.
The holding of office passes judgement on a man.

Da sapienti occasionem et addetur ej sapientia [cf.
previous entry]
Proverbs 9.9.
Give an opportunity to a wise man and his wisdom will be increased.

Vitæ me redde prior
Horace, Epistles I. 7.95.
Restore me to my former life.

Orpheus in sylvis inter Delphinas Arion
Virgil. Eclogues VIII. 56
Orpheus in the woods, Arion among the dolphins.

Inopem me copia fecit.
Ovid. Metamorphoses III. 466.[N]
Abundance has made me destitute.

Faber quisque fortunae suae
Sallust, De republica ordinanda I. 1.
Each man is the architect of his own fortune.
[see Table 5]

Hinc errores multiplices quod de partibus vitae singuli deliberant de summa nemo. [cf. 198. 5; cf. 215.20]
Manifold errors stem from this fact: that individual people deliberate concerning the particular parts of life, but no one deliberates about life as a Utilitas magnos hominesque deosque efficit auxiliijs/quoque favente suis.

Usefulness makes both men and gods great, so long as each one of them has due regard for their own supporters.

Qui in agone contendit a multis abstinet [258.3]
1 Corinthians, 9.25.
The man who takes part in the contest abstains from many things.

Quidque cupit sperat suaque illum oracula fallunt
Ovid. Metamorphoses I, 491.
And what he desires, he hopes for; and his own oracles deceive him.

Serpens nisi serpentem comederit non fit Draco
Erasmus III, 3.61.
If a serpent has not devoured another serpent, it does not become a dragon.

Optimi consiliarj mortuj
The best counsellors are the dead.

Cum tot populis stipatus eat/ In tot populis vix una fides
Seneca, Hercules Oetaeus. 607-608.[N]
Though he may go forth thronged by so great a crowd, in that great crowd there will scarcely be a single faithful friend.

Odere Reges dicta quae dici iubent
Kings hate the commands which they order to be put forth.

Nolite confidere in principibus
Psalms, 145.2. (= A.V. 146.3)
Do not place your trust in princes.

Et multis utile bellum. [cf. 208.33; cf. 248,2]
Lucan, De bello civili I, 182
And war, useful for many purposes.
[see Table 5]

Pulchrorum Autumnus pulcher
Erasmus I, 3.72.
The autumn of beautiful things is itself beautiful.

Usque adeone times quem tu facis ipse timendum.
Lucan, De bello ci vili IV. 185. [N]

Are you in such a state of fear of the man whom you yourself make into an object of dread?

Dux femina facti
Virgil, Aeneid I. 364.
A woman is the leader of the enterprise.

Res est ingeniosa dare
Ovid. Amores I. 8.62.
To give is a deed which calls for genius.

Declinat cursus aurumque volubile tollit
Ovid, Metamorphoses X. 667.
She turns aside her course and picks up the golden missile.

Romaniscult.
[unintelligible Latin]*

Unum augurium optimum tueri patriam [195,15]
Erasmus III, I.57. [N]
One omen is best of all: to defend one’s fatherland.

Bene omnia fecit
Mark 7.37.
He has done all things well.

Et quo quenque modo fugiatque feratque laborem/edocet
Virgil. Aeneid VI, 892. ['edocet’ substituted for “docet” from line 891].
And he teaches by what means each labour may be shunned or shouldered.

Non nulla laborum o virgo nova mi facies inopinave surgit;/ Omnia praecipi atque animo mecum ante peregi.
Virgil, Aeneid VI. 103-105.
O virgin priestess, there is no labour that, for me, can take on a new or unexpected form: I have anticipated them all, and worked through them all previously, by myself and in my heart.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

6 Cultus major censu
   Refinement is greater than wealth.
8 V[i]*derit utilitas
   Ovid, Ars amatoria, 3.671.[N]
   Let utility have seen for itself.
9 Qui eget verset[u]*r in turbâ
   Erasmus III, 10.45.
   Let the man who is in want mingle among the crowd.
11 Augustus rapidè ad locum leniter in loco
   Augustus proceeded rapidly to his destination, but remained at his destination calmly.
16 Tantène animis cèlestibus irç
   Virgil, Aeneid I, 11.
   Can such terrible wrath dwell within heavenly hearts?
17 Tela honoris tenerior
   The thread of honour is more delicate.
18 Alter rixatur de lana ñepe caprina/ Propugnat nugis armatus scilicet ut non/ Sit mihi prima fides. [cf. next entry]
   Horace, Epistles I, 18.15-17.
   The other man quarrels frequently about goat's wool [i.e., contends about trifles]*, and, fully armed, does battle over nonsense: 'To be sure, should not credence first be placed in me?'
   [see Table 5]
21 Nam cur ego amicum offendam in nugis [cf. previous entry]
   Horace, Ars poetica, 450-451.
   For why should I vex a friend on matters of no importance?
24 Illicet obruimur numer[o]. [194.6]
   Virgil, Aeneid II, 424.
   Instantly we are overwhelmed by numbers.

3 Variam dans otium mentem
   Leisure, producing variety in the mind.
   [see Table 5]
Veruntamen vane conturbatur omnis homo
Psalms. 38.12. (= A.V. 39.11)
Nevertheless every man is confounded to no purpose.

Vita salillum.
Life is a little salt-cellar.

Non possumus aliquid contra veritatem sed pro veri-tate. [193,21]
II Corinthians 13.8.
We cannot do anything against the truth, but only on truth’s behalf.

Sapi[n]tia quoque perseveravit mecum
Ecclesiastes 2.9.
Wisdom also has abided with me.

Magnorum fluviorum navigabiles fontes.
Erasmus I. 3.73.
Great rivers have sources upon which one can set sail.

Dos est uxoria lites
Ovid. Ars amatoria II, 155. [N]
Strife is a wife’s contribution to matrimony.

Haud numine nostro
Virgil, Aeneid II, 396.
With the help of gods who are not our own.

Atque animis illabere nostris [194,7]
Virgil, Aeneid III, 89.
And glide into our hearts.

Animos nil magn[g]* laudis egentes
Virgil. Aeneid V, 751.
Souls which have no need for great praise.

Magnanim[ ] heroes nati melioribus annis [194,10]
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 649
Great-hearted heroes, born in better years.

Aevo rarissima nostro/ Simplicitas [195,6]
Ovid, Ars amatoria I, 241-242.
Simplicity, something most unusual for this era of ours.

Qui silet est firmus
Ovid, Remedia amoris, 697
The man who remains silent is steadfast.

Si nunquam fallit imago
Virgil, Eclogues II, 27.
If the image never deceives.

Sed fugit interea fugit irreparabile temp[us]
Virgil, Georgics III, 284.
But, meanwhile, irrecoverable time flies, flies right away.

Totum est quod superest [cf. 198,5; cf. 198,11; cf. 212,9]
What continues to exist is the whole thing.

Possunt quia posse videntur [258,16]
Virgil, Aeneid V, 231.
They can achieve great things, because they appear to be capable of achieving them.

Justitianque omnes cupidâ de mente fugar[u]nt
[193,10]
And they all banished justice from their greedy minds.

Lucrifîculus
A little miser.

Qui bene nugatur ad mensam sepe vocatur
The man who talks nonsense well is often invited to dinner.

faciunt et têdîum finitum?
They make even tedium stylish.

Malum bene conditum ne moveas
Erasmus I, 1.62.
Do not interfere with a bad thing when it is effectively concealed.

Tranquillo quilibet gubernator
Erasmus IV, 4.96.
Anyone can be a steersman on a calm sea.

Nullus emptor difficilis bonum emit opsonium
Erasmus III, 3.50. [N]
No difficult purchaser buys good food. [cf. 221,13, No hucking Cator buyeth good achates].
BACONIANA

1 Quoniam Moses ad duriti[m] cordis permisit vobis [193,17]
   Matthew 19.8.
   Because Moses, on account of your hardness of heart, permitted you.

2 Non nossem peccatum nisi per legem.
   Romans 7.7.
   I would not have become acquainted with sin, had it not been for the law.

3 Discite Justitiam monitj [cf. 196.9; 248.23]
   Virgil, Aeneid VI, 620.
   Be warned: learn justice.

4 Ubj testamentum ibi necesse est mors intercedat testatoris
   Hebrews 9.16.
   Where there is a will it is also necessary that the death of the testator should take place.

6 Scimus quia lex bona est si quis ea utatur legitime
   I Timothy, 1.8.
   We know that a law is good if anyone uses it legitimately.

7 V迦 vobis Jurisperitj
   Luke 11.46.
   Woe unto you, you who are learned in the law.

8 Nec me verbosas leges ediscere nec me Ingrato/voce[m]* prostituisse foro.
   Ovid, Amores I, 15.5-6.
   You complain that I have not memorised verbose laws, or dishonoured my voice before an ungrateful forum.

10 fixit leges pretio atque refixit
    Virgil, Aeneid VI, 622.
    For a price he has both set up laws and torn them down.

11 Nec ferrea Jura Insanumque forum et populi tabularia vidit
    Virgil, Georgics II, 501-502
    And he has not seen the iron laws and the frantic forum and the records of the people.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

13 Miscueruntque novercae non innoxia verba
   Virgil, Georgics II. 129.
   And the step-mothers mingled their words in a poisonous fashion.

14 Jurisconsultio domus oraculum Civitatis [cf. next line,
   'now as ambiguous as oracles.]
   Cicero. De oratore I, 200. [N]
   The house of the man skilled in the law is the oracle of the state.

16 Hic clamosi rabiosa forij/ Jurgia vendens improbus/Iras et verba locat
   Seneca, Hercules Furens, 172-174.[N]
   This man, profiteering from the rabid quarrels of the clamorous forum, shamelessly hires out his anger and his eloquence.

19 In veste varietas sit scissura non sit Let there be variety in a man’s dress, but let there be no rending of it.

20 Plenitudo potestatis est plenitude tempestatis
   An abundance of power is an abundance of troubled times.

21 Iliacos intrâ muros peccatur et extra [195,111
   Horace, Epistles I, 2.16.
   Sin is committed, both within the walls of Troy, and outside them.

22 Prosperum et felix scelus virtus vocatur [195.8]
   Seneca, Hercules Furens, 251-252.[N]
   A successful and lucky crime is called a virtue.

23 Da mihi fallere da iustum sanctumque viderj.
   Horace, Epistles I, 16.61.
   Grant me the chance to remain undiscovered: permit me to seem just and holy.

24 Nil nisi turpe iuvat curç est sua cuique voluptas/ Héc quoque ab alterius grata dolore venit
   Ovid. Ars amatoria I, 749-750.[N]
   Nothing gives delight except what is shameful, and each man cares only for his own pleasure; a welcome pleasure, too, comes from another man’s pain.
26  Casus ne deusne
    Virgil, Aeneid XII. 321.[N]
    Whether chance, or god.

27  fabulæque manes
    Horace, Epistles II. 2.60.
    Another man [takes pleasure in]* Bionian [i.e.,
    satirical]* verses and the black salt of their wit.

1  Ille Bioneis sermonibus et sale nigro
    Horace, Epistles II. 2.60.
    Another man [takes pleasure in]* Bionian [i.e.,
    satirical]* verses and the black salt of their wit.

2  Existimamus divitem omnia scire recte
    We reckon that a rich man knows everything correctly.

3  Quærunt cum quà gente cadant
    Lucan, De bello civili VIII. 504-505.[N]
    They seek for a people with whom they may share their fall.

4  Totus mull[n]dus in mali[gn]*o positus
    The whole world, placed in an evil [. . . ]*.

5  O major tandem parcas insane minori
    Horace, Satires II. 3.326.
    O madman of greater standing, spare, at the end, a madman of lesser stature.

7  forma dat esse
    Form gives existence.

8  Nee fandj fector Ulisses
    Virgil, Aeneid IX. 602.
    Nor Ulysses, a master of deceit.

9  Non tu plus cernis sed plus temerarius audes/ Nec tibj plus cordis sed minus oris inest.
    Ovid, Heroides. 17, 101-102.[N]
    You do not see more clearly, but are more reckless in your audacity; you do not have a greater heart, you simply have less modesty.

11 Invidiae placare paras virtute relictâ [195,10]
    Horace, Satires II. 3.13.
    Are you preparing to appease envy by abandoning virtue?
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

12 Botrus oppositus Botro citius maturescit [cf. 238.10]
   Erasmus III. 2.49.
   A grape cluster placed beside another cluster ripens more quickly.

219 4 fluvis quae procul sunt irrigat.
   Erasmus III, 1.43.
   A river waters lands which are far distant.

6 Cura esse quod audis
   Horace, Epistles I, 16.17; Erasmus IV, 1.92.
   Take care to be the person whom people say you are.

8 Taurum tollet qui vitulum sustulerit
   Erasmus I, 2.51.
   The man who carried a calf will carry a bull.

9 Lunae radijs non maturescit Botrus
   Erasmus IV, 7.73.
   The grape cluster does not ripen in the rays of the moon.

10 Nil profuerit Bulbus; ye potado will doe no good.
   Erasmus IV, 2.42.
   The bulb will have done no good; the potato will do no good.

11 Dormientis rete trahit The sleeping mans nett draweth.
   [232,2]
   Erasmus I, 5.82.
   The net of the sleeping man draws tight.

13 ijsdem è literis efficitur Tragedia et Comedia [cf. next line, ‘Tragedies and Comedies are made of one Alphabet.’]
   Erasmus III, 4.93
   Tragedy and comedy are formed from the same letters.
   [see Table 5]

16 Heroum filij noxae
   Erasmus I, 6.32.
   The sons of heroes are injurious burdens.

18 Alia res sceptrum alia plectrum
   Erasmus IV, 1.56.
BACONIANA

The sceptre is one thing, and the lyre is another.

fere danides

[untranslatble. Bacon may perhaps have intended to write 'Ferrum natare doces', quoting Erasmus I. 4.59 ('You teach the iron to float')]

A[r]i* bore dejectâ qui quis ligna colligit.

Anyone may collect wood from a tree which has been cast down.

Priscis credendum

Erasmus IV. 10.51.

Trust must be placed in the men of old.

Virj iurejurand[o]* pueri talis fallendj

Erasmus III. 3.43.

Men can be deceived by an oath, and boys by dice.

Ipsa dies quandoque parens quandoque noverca est

Erasmus I. 8.64

The day itself is sometimes a parent and sometimes a step-mother.

Ubj non sis qui fueris non [est]* cur velis vivere.

Erasmus I. 8.45.

When you are not the man you have been, there is no reason why you should wish to live.

Compendiaria res improbitas [cf. 193,3; cf. 201.10]

Erasmus III, 2.97.

Dishonesty is a vice which takes short cuts.

Lachrimâ nil citius arsecit

Nothing dries up more quickly than a tear.

Hirundines sub eodem tecto ne habeas.

Erasmus I, 1.2.

Do not have swallows under the same roof.

Aut regem aut fatuum nasci oportet (of a free jester.

Erasmus I, 3.1.

One should be born either a king or a fool (of a free jester).

Exigua res est ipsa Justitia [195,16]

126
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

Erasmus II, 1.67.
Justice itself is an insignificant thing.
[see Table 5]

Quae non posuisti ne tollas
Erasmus III, 4.43.
Do not pick up those things which you have not put down.

Dat veniam corvis vexat Censura columbas [195,17]
[Juvenal, Satires II, 63]; Erasmus III, 5.73.
Censure gives pardon to the ravens, but harasses the doves.
[see Table 5]

Lapsa lingua verum dicit
Erasmus I, 7.17.
An unguarded tongue speaks the truth.

faciunt et sphaceli Immunitatem.
Erasmus I, 2.87.
The pains of the flesh, too, bestow immunity.

Mons cum monte non miscetur
Erasmus III, 3.45.
Mountain is not mingled with mountain.

Haesitantia Cantoris Tussis
Erasmus II, 9.45.
A poet’s cough means he’s lost.

Spes alit exules.
Erasmus III, 1.92.
Hope nourishes exiles.

Romanus sedendo vincit.
Erasmus I, 10.29.
The Roman conquers by sitting still.

Mentiuntur multa cantores (few pleasing speches true
Erasmus II, 2.98.
Poets tell many lies. (few pleasing speeches are true).

Leonis Catulum ne alas
Erasmus II, 3.77
Do not feed a lion’s cub.

Dij laneos habent pedes (They leaue no prynt.
BACONIANA

Erasmus I, 10.82.
The gods have woollen feet. (They leave no print).

222 2 Adoraturj sedent
Erasmus I, 1.2.
Let those who are about to worship, be seated.

6 Coenë fercula nostre/ Mallem convivis quam placuisse cocis.
Martial. Epigrams IX, 81.3-4.
I would prefer the dishes of our meal to have pleased the guests rather than the cooks.

227 12 Asinus avis (a foolish conjecture.
Erasmus III, 7.24.
Let the ass become a bird. (A foolish conjecture)

13 Herculis Cothurnos aptare infantij/ To putt a childes leg into Hercules buskin
Erasmus III, 6.67.
To fit the buskins of Hercules upon an infant.

15 Jupiter orbus/ Tales of Jupiter dead without yssue
Erasmus I, 9.74.
A childless Jupiter.

17 Juxta fluvium puteum fodere/ To dig a well by the Ryuer side
Erasmus III, 3.69.
To dig a well beside a river.

21 In ostio formosus (gratiows to shew
Erasmus III, 6.95
Beautiful when seen in a doorway.

22 Myosobae flyflappers (offyciows fellowes
Erasmus IV, 7.25.
Fly-flaps

24 Jactare iugun To shake the yoke
Erasmus III, 7.78.
To shake the yoke.

228 1 Mira de lente
Erasmus IV, 5.30.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

To talk wonders about a lentil.

2 Quid ad farinas.
   Erasmus III, 6.31.
   What use is this to winning bread?

3 Quarta lunā Natī (Hercules nativity.
   Erasmus I, 1.77
   Born on the fourth day of the new moon.

4 Ollē amicitia.
   Erasmus I, 5.23.
   The friendship based on perks.

5 Venus font.

   [untranslatable]

6 Utraque nutans sententia
   Erasmus III, 6.84.
   Wavering between either opinion.

7 Hasta caduceum
   Erasmus II, 10.96.
   The spear may be a herald’s staff.

17 Panis lapidosus grytty bread
   Erasmus IV, 4.59.
   Stony bread.

19 Laconismus
   Erasmus II, 10.49.
   Brevity of speech.

   [see Table 5]

20 Omnem vocem mittere (from inchantmentes
   Erasmus IV, 6.57.
   To use every kind of saying. (from enchantments)

   [see Table 5]

21 Tertium caput; (of one ouercharged that hath a burden upon eyther showder and the 3rd. vpon his head.
   Erasmus III, 7.90.
   A third head.

24 Triceps mercurius (great cunyng.
   Erasmus III, 7.95.
   Triple-headed Mercury.

25 Creta notare (chaulking and colouring
   Erasmus I, 5.54.
   To mark with chalk. [i.e. approval]*.
Ut phidig signum (presently allowed Erasmus V, 2.43.
Like a statue of Phidias.

Jovis sandalium; (Jupiters slipper (a man onely esteemed for nearnesse
Erasmus II, 7.76.
Jupiter’s sandal.

Pennas nido majore[s]* extendere.
Erasmus I, 6.93.
To spread wings which have outgrown the nest.

Híc Rhodus Híc Saltus (exacting demonstracion.
Erasmus III, 3.28.
Here is Rhodes; here is the leap [which you must take]*.

Atticus in portum
Erasmus I, 10.19.
An Athenian at the harbour’s entrance.

Divinum excipio sermonem
Erasmus IV, 5.35.
I leave mention of the gods on one side.

Agamemnonis hostia
Erasmus II, 5.63.
Agamemnon’s sacrifice.

Comovere sacra
Erasmus IV, 9.56.[N]
To carry down the sacred images.

Domj Conjecturam facere
Erasmus I, 10.48.
To draw a conclusion at home.

Mortuus per somnum vacabis curis (of one that interpretes all thinges to the best
Erasmus IV, 1.18.
You will be free from all care, if you sleep the sleep of death.

Nil sacrj es (Hercules to adonis.
Erasmus I, 8.37.
There is nothing sacred about you.

Plumbeo iugulare gladio (A tame argument
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Erasmus II, 5.10.
To cut a man's throat with a leaden sword.

22 Locrensis bos (a mean present
Erasmus II, 8.62.
An ox from Locris.

Ollaris Deus. (a man respected for his profession without woorth in himself
Erasmus III, 6.73.
A god made of earthenware.

25 In foribus Urceus; an earthen pott in the threshold
Erasmus II, 1.65.
A pitcher at the doorway.

Numerus
Erasmus II, 3.23.
A cipher.

230 4 Ni pater esses
Erasmus II, 7.16.
If you were not my father.
[see Table 5]

5 Vates secum auferat omen.
Erasmus, IV, 10.66
Let the seer take away the omen, along with himself.

6 In eo ipso stas lapide ubj praeco praedicat. of one that is abowt to be bowght and sold.
Erasmus II, 10.77.
You are standing on that very stone from which the crier calls out his wares.

8 Lydus ostium claudit (of one that is gone away wth. his purpose.
Erasmus II, 6.93.
A Lydian closes the door.

10 Utra[m]*que paginam facit An auditors booke (of one to whom both good and yll is imputed.
Erasmus II, 4.15.
He makes up each of the two pages.

12 Non navigas noctu (of one that govern[s] himself acaso (bycause the starres which were wont to be the ship-mans direction appear but in the night.
Erasmus IV, 3.24.
You are not sailing by night.

19 Res est in cardine
Erasmus I, 1.19.
The matter stands at a critical point

20 Undarum in [ul]*nis
Erasmus IV, 6.39.
In the arms of the waves.

21 Lepus pro carnibus (of a man persecuted for profile and not for malice
Erasmus II, 1.80.
A hare hunted for its flesh.

23 Corpore effugere
Erasmus II, 2.87.
To evade with a movement of the body.

24 Nunquid e[t]* saul inter prophetas
1 Samuel, 10.11; Erasmus II, 1.64.
Is Saul also among the prophets?

1 Officere luminibus
Erasmus IV, 6.8.
To obstruct the lights.

3 Felicibus sunt et t[r]*imestres liberi.
Erasmus I, 7.39.
Fortunate people even have children in the third month.

5 Aquilae senectus
Erasmus I, 9.56.
An eagle's old age.

7 Nil ad Parmenonis suem
Erasmus I, 1.10.
Nothing like Parmeno's pig.

8 Aquila in nubibus (a thing excellent but remote
Erasmus I, 9.20
An eagle in the clouds.

9 Mox Sciemus melius vate
Erasmus III, 10.78.
We shall soon know better than the prophet.
In omni fabula et Daedali execratio (of one made a party to all complaintes.
Erasmus II, 10.79
In every story there is also a curse on Daedalus.

Semper tibj pendeat hamus.
Erasmus I, 9.46.
Let the hook always hang for you.

Res redit ad triarios.
Erasmus I, 1.23.
The matter goes back to the men who form the third rank

Tentantes ad trojam pervenere greci [258.1]
Erasmus II, 2.37.
Through their efforts, the Greeks reached Troy.

Cignea cantio
Erasmus I, 2.55.
A swan’s song.

Ex tripode
Erasmus I, 7.90.
From the tripod.

Ominabitur aliquis te conspecto.
Erasmus IV, 2.54.
Someone will make prophecies, once you have been observed.

Leporem [non]*edit
Erasmus II, 1.15.
He has not eaten hare.

Dormientis rete trahit [219,11]
Erasmus I, 5.82.
The net of the sleeping man draws tight.

Vita doliaris
Erasmus I, 8.61.
A life spent in a tub.

Lupus circa puteum chorum agit/ The woolve danceth about the welle.
Erasmus II, 2.76.
The wolf performs a dance around the well.

Spem pretio emere
Erasmus II, 4.5.
To buy hope for a price.

Agricola semper in novum ann[u]*m dives.
The farmer will always be a rich man when the new year comes.

fuimus Troes.
Virgil, Aeneid II, 325: Erasmus I, 9.50.
We Trojans have had our day.

Ad vinum disertj.
Erasmus IV, 9.70.[cf. 243,4]
Eloquent when the wine is flowing.

Pedum visa est via
Erasmus III, 5.55.
A path for the feet to tread has been seen.

Panicus casus
Erasmus III, 7.3.
A case of panic.

Laborem serere.
Erasmus II, 10.54.
To sow hard work.

Hylam inclama[s]*.
Erasmus I, 4.72.
You are crying out for Hylas.

Actum agere
Erasmus I, 4.70.
To revive a question previously settled.

Versuram solvere. To evade by a greater mischeef.
To raise a loan to pay a debt.

Bulbos quærít (of those that looke downe
Erasmus III, 4.44.
He is looking [down] for bulbs.

Chamelçon, Proteus, Euripus.
Erasmus III, 4.1.
The chameleon
Erasmus II, 2.74.
Proteus.
Erasmus I, 9.62.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

Euripus.

2 Mu[m]ta novit vulpes sed Echinus unum magnum
   Erasmus I, 5.18.
   The fox knew many things; but the hedgehog knew one great thing only.

3 Semper Africa aliquid monstrj parit
   Erasmus III, 7.10.
   Africa is always bringing forth some new kind of marvel.

4 Ex eodem ore calidum et frigidum.
   Erasmus I, 8.30.
   Hot and cold come forth from the same mouth.

5 Ex se finxit velut araneus
   Erasmus IV, 4.43.
   Like a spider, he formed a web about himself.

6 Laqueus laqueum cepit.
   Erasmus III, 3.20.
   One snare has caught another snare.

7 Hinc ille lachrimæ; Hydrus in dolio
   Erasmus I, 3.68.
   Hence come those tears.
   Erasmus III, 10.98.
   A water-serpent in a wine jar.

8 Dicas tria ex Curia (liberty upon despair
   Erasmus III, 3.7
   You may say three things from the platform of the court.

9 Argi Collis (a place of robbing.
   Erasmus II, 7.47.
   The hill of Argus.

11 Samiorum flores
   Erasmus II, 9.23.
   Flowers of the Samians.

13 Samius comatus (of one of no expectacion and great proof
   Erasmus III, 7.88.
   A Samian decked with long hair.

17 Què sub axillis fiunt.
   Erasmus II, 2.79.
Things which take place underneath the arm-pits.

In crastinum seria.
Erasmus IV, 7.60.
Serious matters can be left for the morrow.

Lesbia regula.
Erasmus I, 5.93.
The Lesbian rule.

Unguis in ulcere
Erasmus I, 6.79. [Quoted in explanatory note]
A finger nail inserted in an ulcer.

In antro trophonij (of one that never laugheth
Erasmus I, 7.77
In the cave of Trophonius.

Arctum annulum ne gestato
Erasmus I, 1.2.
Do not wear a tight ring.

Areopagita; Scytala.
Erasmus I, 9.41.
An Areopagite.
Erasmus II, 2.1.
A despatch message.

Cor ne edito.
Erasmus I, 1.2.
Do not eat out your heart.

Promus magis quam Condus.
Erasmus II, 4.73.
A distributor, rather than a hoarder, [of stored riches]; [see text]
[see Table 5]

Amazonum cantile[n]a; The Amazons song/ (Delicate persons.
Erasmus II, 1.45.
A song of the Amazons.

Ex ipso boue lora sumere.
Erasmus I, 2.77
To take a thong from the ox's own hide.

Mala attrahens ad se ut C[aec]*ias nubes
Erasmus I, 5.62.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

Attracting evils to one’s person, as the north-east wind attracts clouds.

13 Pryaustē gaudes gaudium.
   Erasmus III, 3.8.
   You rejoice with the joy of the fire-fly.

14 Bellerophontis literae (producing lettres or evidence against a mans self
   Erasmus II, 6.82.
   Bellerophon’s letter.

16 Puer glaciem.
   Erasmus II, 2.41.
   A boy clinging to ice.

18 fontibus apos, floribus austrum
   Virgil, Eclogues II, 58-59; Erasmus III, 6.72
   I have let wild boars loose among my water springs, and let the south wind blow upon my flowers.

21 Aurem vellere.
   Erasmus I, 7.40.
   To pull the ear.

24 Centones
   Erasmus II, 4.58.
   Patchwork garments.

25 Improbitas musē (an importune that wilbe soone awnswered but straght in hand agayne
   Erasmus III, 8.95
   The impudence of a fly.

27 Argentangina, sylver mumpes
   Erasmus I, 7.19.
   The silver quinsy.

28 Lupi illum videre priores
   Virgil, Eclogues IX, 54; Erasmus I, 7.86.
   The wolves saw him first.

29 Dorica musâ.
   Erasmus II, 5.45.
   The Doric muse.

235 Ulysses pannos exuit.
   Erasmus IV, 4.47.
BACONIANA

Ulysses stripped off his garments.

fatis imputandum
Erasmus III, 8.16.
To be imputed to the fates.

Lychnobij
Erasmus IV, 4.51.
Men who live by lamp-light.

Terrae silius
Erasmus I, 8.86.
A son of the earth.

Hoc jam et vates sciunt
Erasmus IV, 8.50.
Even prophets know this now.

Provolvitur ad milvios (a sickly man gladd of the spring.
Erasmus III, 6.8.
He casts himself down before the kites.

Amnestia
Intentional overlooking.

Odi memorem compotorem.
Erasmus I, 7.1.
I hate a drinking companion with a good memory.

Delius natator.
Erasmus I, 6.29
A Delian swimmer.

Numeris platonis obscurius
Erasmus III, 6.32.
More obscure than the mathematics of Plato.

Davus sum non Oedipus
Erasmus I, 3.36. [Terence, Andria I, 2.24]
I am Davus, not Oedipus.

Infixo aculeo fugere
Erasmus I, 1.5.
To flee, with the dart driven in.

Genuino mordere.
Erasmus II, 2.59.
To bite with the jaw-tooth.

Ansam quaerere.
Erasmus I, 4.4.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

To search for a handle.

18 Quç sunt apud inferos [t]*er[ni]*ones.
   Erasmus II, 9.39.
   The triads which exist among the dead.

19 Et Scellij filium abominor (of him that cannot endure the sound of a matter; from Aristocrates Scellius sonne, whome a man devoted to a democracy said he could not abide for the nearness of his name to an Aristocracy.
   Erasmus IV, 8.79.[N]
   And I abominate the son of Scellius.

1 famis campus an yll horse kept
   Erasmus I, 9.68.
   Famine field.

3 quadratus homo. a Cube.
   Erasmus IV, 8.35.
   A man of four-square character.

4 fenum habet in Cornu.
   Horace, Satires I, 4.34.; Erasmus I, 1.81
   He has hay upon his horn. [i.e., he is a dangerous fellow]*

6 Omnia secunda saltat senex.
   Erasmus III, 1.40.
   Everything is as it should be; the old man is dancing

8 Mopso Nisa datur
   Virgil, Eclogues VIII, 26; Erasmus II, 5.100.
   Nisa is given to Mopsus, to be his bride.

9 Dedecus publicum.
   Erasmus III, 8.74.
   A public disgrace.

11 Tanquam de Narthecio
   Erasmus IV, 4.98.
   As if from a medicine chest.

12 Satis quercus; Enowgh of Acornes.
   Erasmus I, 4.2.
   Enough of the oak-tree.
   [see Table 5]

14 Intus canere.
To sing inwardly.

The song of Simonides.

The man who does not know the road to the sea.

The other face of Janus.

To look at shipwrecks from the land.

To live for the present day.

To grow old in a single day.

To be a slave to the drama of the moment.

A man suitably disposed at all times.

The slaves of Sparta are slaves in the highest degree.

I do not come from among heroes of that sort (having the power to do harm).

Dismantled brooms.

Dismantled brooms.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Erasmus I, 2.4.
To drive out one nail with another nail.

3  Extra quærere sese
   Erasmus II, 5.37.
   To search outside oneself.

Erasmus II, 1.5.
A splitter of the cummin plant.

2  Laconicē lunae.
   Erasmus II, 5.25.
   Spartan moons. [full moons and therefore of no help]

3  Corvus aquat[ur]*.
   Erasmus III, 2.3.
   The raven fetches water.

4  Ne incalceatus in montes.
   Erasmus IV, 6.31.
   Do not go into the mountains unshod.

5  Domj Milesia
   Erasmus I, 4.8.
   Milesian activities should be left at home.

6  Sacra hēc non aliter constant.
   Erasmus II, 4.88.
   These sacred rites take place in no other way.

7  Gallus insistit
   Erasmus III, 3.22.
   The cock presses on.

8  Leonis vestigia quaeris (ostentation with couardize
   Erasmus IV, 1.60.
   You are looking for the lion's footprints [not the lion]

9  fumos vendere [198,16]
   Erasmus I, 3.41 [Martial, Epigrams IV, 5-7]
   To sell smoke [i.e., to make empty promises]*

10  Epiphillides. [cf. 217,12]
    Erasmus IV, 2.28.
    Smaller grapes, clustering round larger ones

11  Cal[l]*idum mendacium optimum
BACONIANA

Erasmus IV, 5.68.
A skilful lie is the best.

Solus Currens vincit.
Erasmus I, 9.33.
The only runner must win.

Vulcaneum vinclum.
Erasmus II, 8.72.
A chain forged by Vulcan.

Canis sêviens in lapidem
Erasmus IV, 2.22.
A dog growling at a stone.

Aratro iaculajr.
Erasmus II, 7.45.
To use a plough for a javelin.

Semel rubidus decies pallidus.
Erasmus III, 5.90.
Flushed once, ten times pallid.

Principium dimidium totius
Erasmus I, 2.39.
The commencement is half of the whole enterprise
[see Table 5]

Quot homines tot sententiê [cf. 240,1 (in English.) So many heads so many wittes’]
Erasmus I, 3.7
As many opinions are present as there are men.

Suum cujque pulchrum.
Erasmus I, 2.15.
Whatever is a man’s own, is beautiful.

Que suprâ nos nihil ad nos
Erasmus I, 6.69.
Those things which are above us mean nothing to us.

Ama tanquam osurus oderis tanquam amaturus.
Erasmus II, 1.72.
Love as though you would soon hate; hate as though you would soon love.

Amicorum omnia communia
In nil sapiendo vita jucundissima
Erasmus II, 10.81.
The most delightful way of life consists in knowing nothing.

Parturiunt montes nascetur ridiculus mus
Horace, Ars poetica 139; Erasmus I, 9.14.
The mountains are in labour, and a ridiculous mouse will be born.

Dulce bellum inexpertis
War is sweet to those who have no acquaintance with it [cf. 218, 11: Many a man speaketh of Rob. hood that never shott in his bowe]

Naturam expellas furcâ licet usque recurret.

You may drive out nature with a pitchfork, yet it will constantly hasten back.

Quo semel est imbuta recens servabit odorem

[The jar] will retain the odour, with which it has been once infected, when new.

He who gives quickly, gives twice.

[see Table 5]

Conscience is worth a thousand witnesses.

When the wine is flowing, the truth comes out.

Good laws are caused by bad morals.

A man is sensible in vain, if he has no sense on his own behalf.

The extremity of the law is the extremity of injustice.

When the bottom of the chest has been reached, frugality is too late.

Optimum non nasci
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

Erasmus II, 3.49.
Best not to be born.

10 Musa mihi causas memora
Virgil, Aeneid I, 8.
Recount to me, O muse, the causes.

11 Longē/ Ambages sed summa sequar fastigia rerum
Virgil, Aeneid I, 341-342.
The story’s winding course is long; but I will pursue our matters’ topmost points.

13 Causasque innecte morandj
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 51.
And contrive reasons for delay.

14 Incipit effari mediaque in voce resistit
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 76.
She begins to speak, and stops with the words half-spoken.

15 Sensit enim simulata voce locutam
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 105.
For she saw that she had spoken with feigned tones.

16 quae prima exordia sumat
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 284.
What words should he choose, with which first to begin?

17 Haec alternantj potior sententia visa est.
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 287.
As he wavered, this choice of action seemed to be the better.

18 Et inextricabilis error
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 27.
And inextricable wandering.

19 Obscuris vera involvens.
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 100.[N]
Wrapping up the truth in obscurity.

20 Hae tibi erunt artes
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 852.
These will be your arts.

21 Sic genus amborum scindit se sanguine ab uno.
Virgil, Aeneid VIII. 142.
BACONIANA

And so the pair’s descent splits off from one single lineage.

22 Varioque viam sermonem levabat
Virgil, Aeneid VIII, 309.
And he lightened the journey with varied conversation

23 Quid causas petis ex alto fiducia cessit/ Quo tibj Diva mej
Virgil, Aeneid VIII, 395-396.
Why do you search so widely for reasons? To what place, O goddess, has your faith in me withdrawn?

25 Causas nequicquam nectis inanes
Virgil, Aeneid IX, 219.
You contrive empty reasons in vain.

26 quid me alta silentia cegis/ Rumpere et obductum verbis vulgare dolorem
Virgil, Aeneid X, 63-64.
Why do you force me to break my deep silence, and to use the spoken word to spread abroad my hidden grief?

28 Nequicquam patrias tentasti lubricus artes
Virgil, Aeneid XI, 716.
In your deceitfulness you have attempted your native tricks; but you have attempted them in vain.

29 Do quod vis et me victusque volensque remitto
Virgil, Aeneid XII, 833.
I grant what you wish, and, both conquered and consenting, I surrender.

1 Sed scelus hoc meritj pondus et instar habet
Ovid, Heroides II, 30.
But this crime has the weight and appearance of a just recompense.

2 Quaeque prior nobis intulit ips[a]* ferat
Ovid, Heroides V, 76.
And let [Helen]* herself undergo those sufferings which she first inflicted on me.
Officium fecere pium sed inutile nobis
Ovid, Heroides XIII, 27.[N]
They carried out a duty which was affectionate, but useless to me.

Exiguum sed plus quam nihil illud erit
Ovid, Heroides XIX, 170.[N]
That will be very little, but more than nothing.[cf. 240,15 ‘Some what is better then [sic] nothing’; see Table 5]

Sed latant vires nec sis in fronte disertus [cf. 245,2]
Ovid, Ars amatoria I, 463.
But let your powers lie hidden, and do not permit the expression of your countenance to reveal your skill in speaking.

Sit tibj credibilis sermo consuetaque verba/ praesens ut videare loqui
Ovid, Ars amatoria I, 467-468.
Let your language be credible, and your words familiar, so that you seem to be present, speaking in person.

Ille referre aliter sepe solebat idem
Ovid, Ars amatoria II, 128.
He was often wont to repeat the same thing in different words.

Nec vultu destrue verba tuo [cf. 244,5]
Ovid, Ars amatoria II, 312.
And do not destroy your words with your countenance.

Nec sua vesanus scripta poeta legat
Ovid, Ars amatoria II, 508.
Nor let a crazed poet recite his own verses.

Ars casum simulet
Ovid, Ars amatoria III, 155.
Let art imitate chance.

Quid cum legitima fraudatur litera voce/ Blaesaque fit iusso lingua coacta sono
Ovid, Ars amatoria III, 293-294.
Is not a letter deprived of its rightful pronunciation, and does not the tongue start to lisp when forced to utter the sound enjoined?

7 Sed quae non prosunt singula multa iuvant.
   Ovid, Remedia amoris, 420.
   But those things which are not beneficial individually, help when present in numbers.

8 Sic parvis componere magna solebam
   Virgil, Eclogues I, 23.
   In this way was I accustomed to compare great things with small.

9 Alternis dicetis
   Virgil, Eclogues III, 59.
   You will speak alternately.

10 paulo majora canamus/ Non omnes arbusta iuvant
   Virgil, Eclogues IV, 1-2.
   Let us sing of rather greater matters: the orchards do not cause delight to everyone.

12 Et argutos inter strepere anser olores.
   Virgil, Eclogues IX, 36.
   And I seem to cackle like a goose among tuneful swans.

13 Causando nostros in longum ducis amores
   Virgil, Eclogues IX, 56.
   By making pretexts, you set my desires far to one side.

14 Nec tibj tam sapiens quisquam persuadeat autor
   Virgil, Georgics II, 315.
   And do not let any adviser persuade you, however wise he may be.

15 Nec sum animj dubius verbis ea vincere magnum/quam sit et angustis hunc addere rebus honorem
   Virgil, Georgics III, 289-290.
   Nor do I harbour doubt in my mind, how hard a thing it is to achieve a triumph here with words and to crown a humble theme with such an honour

17 Sic placet an melius quis habet suadere
   Horace, Epodes XVI, 23.
   Does this idea please you? Or does anyone have better advice to give?

Quamquam ridentem dicere verum/ quis vetat
Horace, Satires I, 1. 24-25.
And yet who prohibits a man from laughing as he speaks the truth?

Sed tamen amoto quaeramus seria ludo
Horace, Satires I, 1. 27.
But let us put frivolity to one side, and devote ourselves to serious matters.

Posthabuj tamen illorum mea seria ludo
Virgil, Eclogues VII, 17.
Yet I neglected my serious concerns in favour of their pastime.

O imitatores servum pecus
O you imitators, you servile herd.

Quam temere in nobis legem sancimus iniquam.
Horace, Satires I, 3.67
How thoughtlessly do we ratify an unjust law among ourselves.

mores sensusque repugnant/ Atque ipsa utilitas justj propè mater et çqui
Horace, Satires I, 3.97-98.
Customs and feelings resist; so too does expediency itself, expediency, the mother, as it were, of what is just and fair.

dummodo [r]*isum/ Excutiat sibj non hic cuiquant parcit amico
Horace, Satires I, 4.34-35.
Provided that he strikes up laughter on his own account, this man does not spare any of his friends.

Nescio qu[i]d me[d]it[ans] nugarum totus in illis
Horace, Satires I, 9.2.
Meditating upon trifling matters of some sort, and completely absorbed in them.

Num quid vis occupo/ Noris nos inquit doctj sumus
Horace, Satires I, 9.6.
"So what is it you want?", I say in anticipation.
"You know me", he said, "I am a scholar".

O te bollane cerebrj/ Feliicem aiebam tacitus.
Horace, Satires I, 9.11-12.
"O Bolanus", I said repeatedly to myself, "how enviable you are in your enthusiasm".

ridiculum acrj/ Fortius et melius magnas plerunque secat res.
For the most part, the jest of the sharp-witted man cuts through great matters with greater vigour and effect.

At magnum fecit quod verbis graeca latinis]
Miscuit ð serj studiorum
Horace, Satires I, 10.20-21.
"But he achieved a great feat, in mingling Greek words with the Latin": O you who are late to learn!

Nil ligat exemplum litem quod lite resolvit
Horace, Satires II, 3.103.
An example confirms nothing, if it settles one disputed matter by another equally disputed.

Nimirum insanus paucis videatur eo quod
Maxima pars hominum morbo laborat eodem}
Horace, Satires II, 3.120-121.
To be sure, he would seem mad only to a few people: and for the reason: the greatest part of mankind is troubled by that same mental illness.

Neu si vafer unus et alter/ Insidiatorem praeroso fuger-it hamo/ Aut spern deponas aut artem illusus omittas
If one crafty person or another, after nibbling at the hook, has escaped your ambush, do not abandon hope or give up your skill, ridiculed though you may be.

gaudent praenomine molles] auriculae
Horace, Satires II, 5.32-33.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Pliant ears take pleasure in hearing the forename.

13 Renuis tu quod jubet alter
   Horace, Epistles II. 2.63.
   You reject what the other man commands.

14 Qui variare cupit rem prodigaliter unam.
   Horace, Ars poetica, 29.
   The man who desires to give variety to a single theme, through a monstrous use of images.

15 Et adhuc sub judice lis est.
   Horace, Ars poetica, 78.
   And even now the dispute lies before the judge.

16 [Proicit]* ampullas et sesquipedalia verba
   Horace, Ars poetica, 97.
   He discards his bombast, and words that stretch for half a yard.

17 Quid dignum tanto feret hic promissor hiatu
   Horace, Ars poetica, 138.
   What will this pedlar of promises produce that is worthy of such pompous language?

18 Atque ita mentiur sic veris falsa remitt[i]*t
   Horace, Ars poetica, 151.
   And he invents with such mastery, and uses such skill to set the false beside the true.

19 tantum series juncturaque pollet/ Tantum de medio sumptis accedit honoris
   Horace, Ars poetica, 242-243.
   So great is the power of sequence and connection;
   so great the esteem which accrues to themes selected from the familiar.

21 Ergo fungar vice cotis acutum
   Reddere qu$ possit ferrum exors ipsa secandj
   Horace, Ars poetica, 304-305.
   Therefore I will play the part of a whetstone, which is able to make iron sharp, yet is itself incapable of cutting.

23 Haec placuit semel haec decies repetita placebit
   Horace, Ars poetica, 365.
   This one has given pleasure once; this other one
BACONIANA

will always please, though summoned back ten times.
[see Table 5]

24 Fas est et ab hoste docerj
Ovid. Metamorphoses IV, 428
It is right to be taught, even by an enemy.

25 Usque adeo quod tangit idem est tamen ultima/ dis-tan[1]*
Ovid. Metamorphoses VI,67.[N]
To such an extent it remains the same, wherever it reaches; yet the extreme edges differ from each other.

26 Quis furor auditos inquit praeponere visis
Ovid. Metamorphoses VI, 170.[N]
“What madness is this,” she said, “to prefer those of whom you have heard to those you have seen?”
[see Table 5]

27 Pro munere poscimus usum
Ovid. Metamorphoses X, 37.[N]
We ask for this enjoyment as a favour.

28 Inde retro redeunt idemque reetexitur ordo
Ovid. Metamorphoses XV, 249.
Then they come back once more, and the same order is restored.

29 Nil tam bonum est quin male narrando possit/ depravari
Terence, Phormio IV, 4. 15-16.[N]
Nothing is so good that it cannot be distorted by being narrated badly.
[see Table 5]

248 1 Furor arma ministrat
Virgil, Aeneid I, 150.
Madness supplies arms.

2 Pulchrumque morj succurrit in armis [c.f. 208,23; 212,22]
Virgil, Aeneid II, 317.
And I realize how fine a thing it is to die in arms.
[see Table 5]

3 Aspirat primo fortuna laborj
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Fortune favours our first exertion.

4 Facilis jactura sepulchrj
Virgil, Aeneid II, 646.
The loss of a tomb is easy to bear.

5 Cedamus phoebo et monitj meliora sequamu[r] [cf. 196,7]
Virgil, Aeneid III, 188.
Let us yield to Phoebus, and, once warned, let us follow the better course.

6 Fata viam invent
The fates will find a way.

7 Degeneres animos timor arguit
Fear proves that hearts are base.

8 Viresque acquirit eundo
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 175.
And, as it progresses, it acquires strength.

9 Et caput inter nubila condit
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 177.
And it conceals its head among the clouds.

10 Et magnas territat urbes/Tam ficti pravique tenax quam nuntia verj
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 187-188.
And it terrifies great cities, both holding fast to what is false and wicked, and presaging the truth.

12 Gaudens et pariter facta atque infecta canebat
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 190.
It rejoiced and sang alike of deeds performed and actions not yet undertaken.

13 Nusquam tuta fides [196,8]
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 373.
Nowhere is trust safe.

14 Et oblitos famae meliori[s]* amantes
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 221.
And the lovers, forgetful of their nobler reputation.

15 Varium et mutabile semper/ Fëmina

153
Virgil. Aeneid IV, 569-570.
A woman will always be a fickle and changeable thing.

17 Furens quid fëmina possit
Virgil. Aeneid V, 6.
What a woman, when raving, can do.

18 Quo fata trahunt retrahuntque sequamur/ Quicquid id est superanda est omnis fortun[a] ferendo
Virgil. Aeneid V, 709-710.
Wherever the fates drag us, and wherever they drag us back, let us follow; whatever it may be, every stroke of fortune can be overcome by endurance.

20 Tu ne cede malis sed contrā audentior i[to]
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 95
Do not yield to evil threats, but, with greater boldness, go forth to meet them.

21 Hoc opus hic labor est
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 129
This is the task, this is the object of endeavour.

22 Nullj fas casto sceleratum insistere li[men]
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 563
It is not right that any man of purity should set foot upon the accursed threshold.

23 Discite justitiam monitj [cf. 196.9; 216.3]
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 620.
Be warned: learn justice.

24 Quisque suos patimur manes [196.10]
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 743.
Each one of us endures his own fate in the afterlife.
[see Table 5]

25 Neu patriç valida[s]* in viscera vertite vires
Virgil, Aeneid VI, 833.
And do not turn your country’s mighty strength against its vital parts.

26 Verique effēta senectus.
Virgil, Aeneid VII, 440.
And old age, too weak to know the truth.
Spes sibi quisque
Virgil, Aeneid XI, 309.
Each man may place his hopes upon himself.

Nec te ullius violentia vincat
Virgil, Aeneid XI, 354.
And let no man’s violence constrain you.

Respice res bello varias
Virgil, Aeneid XII, 43.
Take care for variations of fortune in warfare.

Credidimus lachrimis an et hae simulare docentur/ Hœ quoque habent artes quaque iubentur eunt
Ovid, Heroides II, 51-52.
We have placed trust in your tears: or are even tears taught how to pretend? Do tears too have stratagems, and issue forth to where they are told to go?
[see Table 5]

Quaecunque ex merito spes venit çqua venit
Ovid, Heroides II, 62.
Whenever a hope is derived from merit, that hope is just.

Simplicitas digna favore fuit
Ovid, Heroides II, 64.
Simplicity was worthy of esteem.
Exitus acta probat careat successibus opto/ Quisquis ab eventu facta notanda putet.

Ovid, Heroides II, 85-86.

Their consequence vindicates the actions; but, I pray, let no one enjoy success if he thinks that deeds should be branded by their outcome.

Ars fit ubj a teneris crimine condiscitur annis

Ovid, Heroides IV, 25.

A fault imbued from tender years becomes an art.

Jupiter esse pius statuit quodcumque iuvaret

Ovid, Heroides IV, 133.

Jupiter has decided that whatever gave us pleasure, was right.

Non honor est sed onus [...]*/ Si qua voles apte nubere nube parj

Ovid, Heroides IX, 31-32.

It is not an honour but a burden...; should you wish to marry rightly, marry an equal.

Perdere posse sat est si quem iuvat ista potestas.

Ovid, Heroides XII, 75.

To be able to spread ruin is enough, if the power to do that causes anyone pleasure.

Terror in his ipso major solet esse periclo/ Quaeque timere libet et pertimuisse pudet

Ovid, Heroides XVI, 351-352.

Terror in these matters is wont to exceed the danger itself; and though one may fear some things, it is shameful to dread them utterly.

An nescis longas regibus esse manus

Ovid, Heroides XVII, 166.

Perhaps you do not know that kings have far-reaching hands.

Utilis interdum est ipsis injuria passis

Ovid, Heroides XVII, 187.

An injury is sometimes useful even to the very people who have sustained it.

Fallitur augurio spes bona sepe suo
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

Ovid, Heroides XVII, 234.
Good hope is often deceived by its own augury.

20  Quae fecisse iuvat facta referre pudet
Ovid, Heroides XIX, 64.
Things which it is delightful to have done, but shameful to repeat.

21  Consilium prudensque animj sententia jurat/ Et nisi judicij vincula nulla valent
Ovid, Heroides XXI, 137-138.
Resolution, and the wise decision of the mind, swear oaths; and no oaths are valid, if they lack the bonds of judgement.

23  Sin abeunt studia in mores
Ovid, Heroides XV, 83.[N]
But if inclinations are transformed into character.

24  Illa verecundis lux est praebenda puellis/ Qua timidus latebras speret habere pudor
Ovid, Amores I, 5. 7-8.[N]
That light is the light which should be offered to bashful maidens; for there their timid modesty could hope to find a hiding place.

26  Casta est quam nemo rogavit
Ovid, Amores I, 8. 43.[N]
She is chaste, whom no one has solicited
[see Table 5]

27  Quj non vult fierj desidiosus amet
Ovid, Amores I, 9. 46.[N]
If man does not wish to become slothful, let him fall in love.

28  Gratia pro rebus merito debetur inemptis
Ovid, Amores I, 10.43.[N]
Gratitude is deservedly owed for things unbought.

29  Quem metuit quisque perisse cupit
Ovid, Amores II, 2.10.[N]
If anyone has feared a man, he wills that man to perish.

1   Verbera sed audi.
But hear chidings.

Auribus mederj difficillimum. [197,1]
It is a very difficult thing to heal the ears.

Noluit Intelligere ut benè ageret
Psalms, 35.4. (= A.V. 36.3)
He was unwilling to understand how to pursue virtue.

Noli aemularj in malignantibus
Psalms, 36.1. (= A.V. 37.1)
Do not be esteemed among those who contrive malice.

Nil malo quam illos similes esse suj et me mej
I would prefer nothing rather than that they should resemble their own selves, and that I should resemble myself.

Quia tacuj inveteraverunt ossa mea (speach may now & then breed smart in ye. flesh; but keeping it in goeth to ye bone.
Psalms, 31.3 (= A.V. 32.3)
Because I have remained silent my bones have become old.

Credidi propter quod locutus sum. [193,7]
Psalms, 115.10 (= A.V. 116.10)
I believed; and on account of this I have spoken.

Obmutuj et humiliatus sum siluj et[i]*m a bonis et dolor meus renovatus est. [193,6]
Psalms, 38.3. (= A.V. 39.2)
I have been speechless and I have been abased: I have remained silent even concerning good things and my grief has been renewed.

Placidasque viri deus obstruit aures
Virgil, Aeneid IV, 440.
And Heaven blocks the mortal’s gentle ears.

Cum perverso perverteris;
Psalms, 17.27. (= A.V. 18.26)
You will be perverse with the wrong-headed.

lex talionis
The law of retaliation in kind.

Obmutuj et non aperuj os meum quoniam tu fecistj
Putting off evil cares and desires.

We play without caution, and are given away by our very enthusiasm.
good betymes; bonum manè
Good morning.

Diluculo surgere saluberrimum est.
It is very healthy to rise at daybreak.
[see Table 5]

Surge puer mane sed noli surgere vanè.
Rise early in the morning, my boy, but do not rise vainly.
[see Table 5]

Stulte quid est somnus gelidae nisi mortis imago/ Longa quiescendi tempora fata dabunt.
Ovid. Amores II, 9.41-42.[N]
Fool, what is sleep other than an image of chill death? The fates will grant great tracts of time where you can take your rest.

Tentantes ad Trojam pervenere/ graecj atque omnia perr- tentare [231,14]
Erasmus II, 2.37.
Through their efforts, the Greeks reached Troy, and tried out every stratagem.

Qui in agone contendit a multis abstinet. [212.13]
1 Corinthians, 9.25.
The man who takes part in the contest abstains from many things.

Parerga; mouente[s]* sed nil promoventes opero-sit[al]*es. nil ad summ[u] *m
Unnecessary elaborations; excessive pieces of sophistication, which produce activity but bring about no progress, contributing nothing to the achievement of the principal aim.

Claudus in via [cf. 207,7]
A lame man on the right road [is better than a runner who has strayed away from it].

Omni[a]* possum in eo qui me confortat
Philippians, 4.13.
I can do all things through Him who gives me great strength.

Possunt quia posse videntur [215,22]
Quod adulationis nomine dicitur bonum quod/ //obtrectationis malum.
What is said in the name of adulation is good;
what is said by way of disparagement is bad.

Cujus contrarium majus; majus aut privatio cujus minus [minus].# [see p. 261 for the only two other examples of this marginal mark]
A thing of which the contrary is greater, is greater; or a thing of which the loss is less, is less

Cujus opus et virtus majus majus cujus minus minus
A thing of which the workmanship and worth are greater, is greater; if its workmanship and worth are less, then it is less.

quorum cupiditates majores aut meliores./ //quorum scientiae aut artes honestiores.
Those things for which desires are greater or better [are greater or better], those things of which the knowledge or art is more honourable [are themselves more honourable].

quod vir melior eligeret ut injuriam potius pati/ //quam facere.
What a better man would choose [is itself better]*; as, for example, to suffer an injustice rather than inflict it.

quod manet melius quam quod transit.
What abides is better than what passes by.

quorum quis auter cupit esse bon[a]*, cujus horret/ //malum.
Those things of which someone wishes to be the author are good; what he shrinks from doing is bad.

quod quis amico cupit facere bonum quod inimico/ //malum.
What someone desires to do for a friend is good;
what he desires to do for an enemy is bad.
Diuturniora minus diuturnis
More long-lasting things [are better]* than less long-lasting things.

Conjugata Things joined together [are better]*

quod plures eligunt potius quam quod pauciores.
What more people choose, rather than what fewer people choose.

quod controvertentes dicunt bonum perinde ac omnes [269,12]
What people engaged in a controversy say is good, [is good], just as though everyone [had said it was good].

quod scientes et potentes, quod judicantes.
What men of knowledge and power, what men of judgement [say is good, is good]*.

Quorum praemia majora, majora bona, quorum/ mulctae majores, majora mala
Those things for which the rewards are greater, are greater goods; those things for which the penalties are greater, are greater evils.

Quae confessis et tertij majoribus majora.
[untranslatable] *

quod ex multis constat magis bonum cum multi//artic- ulj bonj dissectj magnitudinem prae se ferunt
The thing which consists of many parts is a greater good, when many sections of that good thing, divided up, conspicuously display their significance.

Nativa asc[isc]itis.
You adopt those things which are native to you.

Qua[e]* supra aetatem praeter occasionem aut op[p]ortuni-/tate[m] praeter naturam [l]*ocj praeter conditionem/ temporis praeter naturam personae vel instru-/menti vel iuvamenti majora quam quae secundum.
Those things which surpass the present age, which go beyond the occasion or the opportunity, beyond the nature of the place, beyond the condition of the time, beyond the nature of the person or the means or assistance at hand, are greater than those which conform thereto.

261 1// quae in graviore tempore utilia ut in morbo senectute///aut adversis. [269.8]
Those things which are useful in more grievous times, as in illness, old age or adverse circumstances.

3// Ex duobus medijs quod propinquius est fruj [?]*
Out of two middling things, that which is the nearer [. . .?]*.

4// Quae tempore futuro et ultimo quia sequens tempus//evacuat praeterita
Things which belong to a future and final period [are better]*, because the sequence of passing time obliterates the past.

6  Antiqua novis nova antiquis
Things ancient to the moderns were modern to the ancients.

7  Consuetas novis nova consuetis
Things ordinary to the moderns are modern to the humdrum.

8// quod ad veritatem magis quam ad opinionem [ma]jus//[est]. quae ad opinionem pertinet, ratio est ac/
//modus, quod quis si clam fore putaret non//eligeret
What shows more respect for the truth than for opinion is greater. The assessment and test, to consider whether opinion comes first, is this: that if anyone had thought his action would have taken place unnoticed, he would not have chosen to do it.

12// Polychreston ut divitiae, robur, potentia, facultates//animj
Good for many purposes; as are riches, strength, power, faculties of the mind.

14#  Ex duobus quod tertio equali adjunctum majus ips[orum se]* reddit
If one of two things is linked to a third of equal weight, it renders itself the greater of the two.
[see Table 5]

16# Quae non latent cum adsunt, quam quae latere possunt majora. [269,3]
Those things which do not escape notice when present are greater than those which are capable of escaping notice.

18// quod magis ex necessitate ut oculus unus lusco [269,1]
Something which is esteemed more highly from necessity; as a single eye is valued by a one-eyed man.

19// quod expertus facile reliquit [269,5]
What an experienced person has forsaken easily [is bad].*

20// quod quis cogit tur facere malum
What anyone does through compulsion is bad.

21// quod sponte fit bonum
What is done of one’s own accord is good.

22// quod bono confesso redimitur
What is redeemed with sound acknowledgement.

262 3 Cujus excusatio paratior est vel venia indulta magis/minus malum.
A thing for which an excuse is more readily available or for which pardon is more liable to be granted is a lesser evil.

263 1 Melior est oculorum visio quam animj progressio
Ecclesiastes, 6.9.
The vision of the eyes is better than the running forward of the mind.

2// Spes in dolio remansit sed non ut ant[i]*dotum sed ut/
//major morbus
Hope remained in the jar, but not as an antidote; rather, as a greater disease.

4 Spes omnis in futuram vitam consumend[a]* sufficit/praesentibus bonis purus sensus.
All hope must be bestowed upon a future life; for our present welfare a pure frame of mind is sufficient.
6 Spes vigilantis somnium;
   Hope is a waking man’s dream.
7 vitae summa brevis spem nos vetat inc[oh]*are longam.
   Horace, Odes I. 4.15.
   The brief span of life forbids us to fashion a hope spreading out across long vistas of time.
8// Spes facit animos leves t[u]*midos inèquales //peregri-
   Hope makes men’s minds fickle, excited, capricious and liable to wander.
10// Vidi ambulantes sub sole cum adolescente secundo/
   //qui consurget post eum.
   Ecclesiastes, 4.15.
   I saw those who walk beneath the sun, with a second youth who will rise up after him.
12// Imaginationes omnia turbant, timores multiplicant/
   //voluptates corrumpunt.
   Fancies throw everything into confusion; they multiply fears, and corrupt pleasures.
14// Anticipatio timor[i]*s salubris ob inventionem remedij/
   //spei institit [?]*
   The anticipation of fear is healthy since it means the discovery of a remedy for hope [...?]*.
16// Imminent futuro, ingrati in praeteritum semper/adoles-centes
   They grasp at the future, ungrateful towards the past, always immature.
18 Vitam sua sponte fluxam magis fluxam reddimus/ per continuationes spe[i]*
   We make life, which, of its own nature, is transient, more transient still through continuing to hope.
20 Praesentia erunt futura non contra
   The future will become the present, and not the other way round.
1// Quod inimicis nostris gratum est ac optabile ut //nobis eveniat malum, quod molestiae et terrorj est bonum.
   What is pleasing to our enemies and what they find desirable should it happen to us, is bad: what is a vexation and a source of alarm to them is good.

4 Metuo danaos et dona ferentes
Virgil, Aeneid II, 49.
I fear the Greeks even when bringing gifts.

5 Hoc Ithacus velit et magno mercentur Atridae.
Virgil, Aeneid II, 104.
This the Ithacan would wish, and this the sons of Atreus would purchase for a great price.

9 Concilia[nt]* homines mala, a forcin warre to appeas parties at home Bad times reconcile mankind.

11// Quod quis sibj tribuit et sumit bonum, quod in/ //alium transfert malum
What someone assigns to himself and takes up is good: what he makes over to another person is bad.

13 non tam invidiae impertiendae quam laudis communicandae gratia loquor.
Cicero, Pro Sulla, 9.[N]
I do not speak so much for the sake of dividing out unpopularity as for sharing praise.

15// Quod quis facile impertit minus bonum quod quis/ paucis et gravatim impertit majus bonum
A thing which someone bestows readily is a lesser good: a thing which he bestows upon a few, and does so reluctantly, is a greater good.

17 Te nunc habet ista secundum.
Virgil, Eclogues II, 38.
This [shepherd’s pipe]* now has you, to be its second master.

18// Quod per ostentationem fertur bonum, quod per/ //excusationem purgatur malum.
What is carried through with showy confidence is good: what is justified by means of excuses is bad.

20// Nescio quid peccati portet haec purgatio
Terence, Heautontimorumenos IV, 1.12.
Cujus exuperantia vel excellentia melior ejus et genus melius.

If the pre-eminence or excellence of something is superior, then its species also is superior.

A matter in which it is more dangerous to err is better than that in which error takes place with less danger.

[see Table 5]

Quod polychrestum est melius quam quod ad unum refertur ob incertos casus humanos.

What is good for many purposes is better than what is dedicated to one single purpose on account of the uncertainty of the events which befall humanity.

A thing of which the contrary or the deprivation is bad, is good; but a thing of which the contrary is 20// In quo non est satietas neque nimium melius eo in / //quo satietas est

A thing in which there is neither satiety nor excess is better than that in which satiety is present

22// In quo vix erratur melius eo in quo error proclivis [cf. 266,7]
A thing in which error scarcely takes place is better than that in which error is liable to occur.
[see Table 5]

23// Finis melior ijs quae ad finem; [cf. 207,10]
The conclusion is better than those things which lead up to the conclusion.

24// Cujus causa sumptus facti et labores toleratj bonum;/
//si ut evitetur malum.
If expenses are undertaken and labours endured for the sake of something, then that thing is good; if these things are done so that it should be avoided, then it is bad.

26// Quod habet rivales et de quo homines contendunt/
//bonum; de quo non est contentio malum. [cf. 267,9]
A thing which has competitors, and for which men contend, is good; a thing for which there is no contention is bad.
[see Table 5]

28 Differ[entia]* inter fruj et acquirere.
There is a difference between enjoyment and acquisition.

267 1 Quod laudatur et praedicatur bonum quod occultatur/ et vituperatur malum.
What is praised and commended is good; what is concealed and censured is bad.

3// Quod etiam inimicj et malevoli laudant valde bonum./
//quod etiam amicj reprehendunt magnum malum.
Something which even enemies and the ill-disposed praise is exceedingly good; something with which even friends find fault is a great evil.
[see Table 5]

5  Quod consulto et per meliora judicia proponitur/ majus bonum.
   What is put forward designedly and after better assessment is a greater good.

7//  Quod sine mixtura malj melius quam quod refractum/et non syncerum.
   Something with no admixture of evil is better than something which has been broken open and is not pure.

9  Possibile et facile bonum quod sine labore et parvo/tempore cont[ra] malum [cf, 266,6]
   What is possible and easy to do is good; what can be done without exertion and in a short space of time is, on the other hand, bad.
   [see Table 5]

11 Bona confessa jucund[a]* sensu[i]* comparatione.
   Good deeds acknowledged become agreeable to the understanding through the process of comparison.

12  Honor; voluptas;/ Vita[;]/ bona valetudo[;]/ suavia objecta sensuum;
   Honour; pleasure; life; good health; delightful objects of the senses.

16  Inducunt tranquillum sensum virtutes ob securitatem/et contemptum rerum humanarum; facultates/ animj et rerum gerendarum ob sper et metum/ subigendum; et diviti[ae]*...
   Virtues induce a sense of tranquillity on account of the security and contempt for human affairs [which they produce]*; so do abilities of the mind and the capacity to manage affairs, on account of their tendency to suppress hope and fear; and riches...

20  Ex aliena opinione: laus.
   From another person’s opinion; praise.

21  Quae propria sunt et minus communicata; ob honor[em]/ qu[em] continent, ut animalia ut plantae et amplius;/ sed id amplius potest esse malj.
  Things which are individual and less shared on account of the honour which they contain [are good]*; as animals, as plants, and more; but that can mean more evil.

24 Congruentia, ob raritatem et genium et proprietatem ut in familij et professionibus Things which are in harmony with each other on account of their rarity and special character and peculiarity [are good]*; as in families and in professions.

26 Quae sibj deesse quis putat licet sint exigua Let those things which someone thinks are lacking to him be of little significance.

268 1 ad quae naturâ proclives sunt
  Things to which they are prone by nature.
  2 quae nemo abjectus capax est ut faciat Things which no worthless person is capable of doing.
  3 Majus et continens minore et contento [cf, 201.13]
  What is greater and contains something else [is better than]* what is smaller and contained within another thing.
  4 Ipsum quod suj causa eligitur
  That very thing which is chosen for its own sake.
  5 quod omnia appetunt.
  What all things strive after.
  6 quod prudenti[â]* adepti eligunt
  What the adept choose from prudence.
  7 quod efficiendi et custodiendi j vim habet.
  Something which has the power to accomplish things and to preserve them.
  8 Cuj res bonae sunt consequentes.
  Something of which good things are the consequences.
  9 maximum maximo ipsum ipsis; unde exuperant...
  [untranslatable]*; whence they excel...
  10 quae majoris bonj conficientia sunt ea majora sunt
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON'S PROMUS

bona.
Things which are productive of a greater good are themselves greater goods.

12 quod propter se expetendum eo quod propter ali[ud]*
What is desirable for its own sake [is better than]* what is desirable on account of something else.

13 Fallacula* in diversis generibus et proportionibus
A fallax may be found in classifications and analogies, when their terms differ from each other.

14 Finis non finis
The aim, not the end.
[see Table 5]

15 Minus indigens eo quod magis indiget
Something which stands in need of less [is better than]* something which needs more.

16 quod/ paucioribus et facilioribus indiget
Something which stands in need of fewer things, which are more easily obtained [is better than something which needs more]*.

17 quoties ho[c]* sine illo fierj no[n]* potest, illud/ sine hoc fierj potest illud melius
As often as one thing cannot be done without a second thing, but that second thing can be done without the first, then that second thing is the better.

19 principium non principio; finis autem et principium/antitheta; non majus videtur principium quia/ primum est in opere; contra finis quia primum/ in mente; de perpetratore et consiliario.
The commencement is not at the beginning; yet the end and the beginning are antitheses; the beginning does not seem the greater because it comes first in the work; on the other hand the end appears greater because it comes first in the mind; concerning the performer and the adviser.

23 Rarum copiosis honores; mutton venison
It is a rare thing for honours to be granted to the eloquent.
Copiosum vari[a]*t usu: optimum aqua
He varies eloquent discourse through experience:
the best [...]*

difficiioribus/ facilioria, difficilioribus Things which are more difficult for the more good-natured [to do]*, and easier for the more disagreeable.

Quod magis a necessitate ut oculus unus lusco.
[261.18]
Something which is esteemed more highly from necessity; as a single eye is valued by a one-eyed man.

Major videtur gradus privationis quam diminutionis
The step of deprivation appears greater than the process of gradual loss.
[see Table 5]

Quae non latent cum adsunt majora quam quæ/ latere possunt. [261.16]
Those things which do not escape notice when present are greater than those which are capable of escaping notice.

Quod expertus facile reliquit malum. quod mordicus tenet bonum. [261,19]
What an experienced person has forsaken easily is bad; what he holds on to tenaciously is good.

In aliquibus manetur quia non datur regressus
In some situations one remains, unmoving, because no opportunity exists for retreat.

Quae in graviore tempore utilia ut in morbo/ senectute adversis. [261.1]
Those things which are useful in more grievous times, as in illness, old age or adverse circumstances.

The soldier like a coreselett; bellaria, et appetitiva./
redd hearing. Love
The soldier like a coreselett; confectionery and appetizers, redd hearing. Love.

Quod controvertentes dicunt bonum perinde ac/ omnes.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

[260,18]
What people engaged in a controversy say is good, [is good], just as though everyone [had said it was good].

boriae penetrabile frigus adurit
Virgil. Georgics I, 93.
The north wind’s piercing cold freezes right through.

270  1  Analogia Caesaris
The “Analogy” of Caesar.
2  Verb[a]* et clausulae ad/exercitationem accentus/ et ad gratiam sparsam/ et ad su[av]*itatem [cf. 273,11]
Words and concluding phrases directed towards emphasis upon the main point, and to the spreading of courtesy, and to pleasantness.
27  With this (cum hoc quod/ verificare vult)
With this (with this, a phrase which is intended for verification).
29  Without that (absque hoc/ quod Without that (without this, a phrase which...

271  2b  A[g]*nosce teipsum (a chiding or disgrace
Erasmus I, 7.95.
Know thyself
[see Table 5]

273  3  Baragan: perpetuo Juvenis
Baragan; perpetually young.
11  Verba interjectiva sive ad gratiam sparsam [an endorsement across the page; cf. 270,2]
Words inserted either for the spreading of courtesy [...]*

274  3  Cujus contrarium malum bonum, cujus bonum/ malum.
A thing of which the contrary is bad, is good; a thing of which the contrary is good, is bad.
5  Non tenet in ijs rebus quarum vis in temperamento/ et mensurâ sita est.
This does not hold for those things of which the essence resides in moderation and balanced proportion.

7  Dum vitant stulti vitia in contraria currunt
    Horace, Satires I, 2.24.
    While fools avoid errors, they run straight into those errors’ opposite forms.

8  x  Media via nulla est quae nec amicos parit nec inimicos tollit [the marginal cross occurs again on this page (line 25) and on 271,16 (for an English entry, ‘I will prooue’)]
    There is no middle way which neither creates friends nor makes away with enemies.

12  Utinam esses calidus aut frigidus sed quoniam tepidus/nec eveniet ut te expuam ex ore meo.
    Revelation 3.16.
    Would that you were hot or cold; but because you are lukewarm, it will come to pass that I shall spit you forth from my mouth.

14  Dixerunt fatui medium tenuere beatj [cf. 274,5]
    Fools have said, ‘The blessed have kept to the middle way’.
    [cf. Table 5]

15  Cujus origo occasio bona, bonum; cujus mala malum.
    If the origin of a thing is a good occurrence, then that thing is good; if its origin is a bad occurrence, then that thing is bad.

16  Non tenet in ijs malis quae vel mentem informant,/ vel affectum corrugunt, sive resipiscientiam in-ducendo sive necessitatem, nec etiam in fortuitis.
    This does not hold for those evil things, which either fashion the mind, or correct the disposition, whether by introducing repentance or compulsion; nor does it hold for events which occur by accident.

23  Primum mobile turns about all ye. rest of ye. Orbes.
    The first mobile rotates all the rest of the orbs.

25  x  Ex malis moribus bonae leges [243,5]
    Erasmus I, 10.61.
LATIN ENTRIES IN BACON’S PROMUS

Good laws are caused by bad morals.

275 1 Many effectes like the serpent that devoureth her/mother so they destroy their first cause as/inopia luxuria etc.

.../poverty, extravagance, etc.

6 Usque adeo latet utilitas [204,7]
   Ovid, Metamorphoses VI, 438. [N]
   Right up to now the benefit lies hidden.

7 Aliquisque malo fuit usus in illo [204,6]
   Ovid, Metamorphoses II, 332. [N]
   And there was some benefit in that calamity.

8 Quod ad bonum finem dirigitur bonum, quod ad/malum malum
   An action which is directed towards a good objective is good; an action which is directed towards a bad objective is bad.

10 Philologia
   A love of learned enquiry and debate.
Dear Editor,

Two matters in Baconiana No.195 warrant my comment.

First, the Enoch Powell contribution. It is a pity that you echo the phrase ‘committee theory’ which, when Powell’s article was first published in The Spectator, was a predictable Stratfordian ploy to denigrate his Greenwood-like idea of many pens (but one master mind) within the enterprise we know as Shakespeare. It helped provoke reactions of scorn within that journal from (among others) Denis Healey. The idea conveyed by the word ‘committee’ is certainly not what Powell had in mind. I think it is a pity too that he chose St. Matthew’s gospel rather than Shakespeare for the last book of his life. Indeed, it is part of the stigma linked to all querying of the Bard’s identity that Powell’s biographers neglect the facet of his interests that relates to Shakespearean authorship. Robert Shepherd, a few years ago, ignored it completely. And the latest life of Powell by Simon Heffer, published November 1998, gives very little room to Shakespearean matters within a thousand pages.

Second, I was somewhat surprised to find my article on J.M. Robertson accompanied – without any indication to me that this was the editor’s intention – by comment from our Chairman, Thomas Bokenham. The appropriate response, to use an established Baconian phrase, must be ‘the retort courteous’. Much of that commentary is useful: if, when writing my article, I’d had access to the Baconiana files (as I currently do) some of these earlier items on Robertson that Mr. Bokenham mentions would have been helpful to me. Robertson did, of course, edit Bacon’s works and lecture to our Society on occasions – all before the production of his 1913 book. My article seeks to show that he may have been swayed by many factors in offering anti-Baconian views. And that he managed later to upset Stratfordians, by being forced into a particular route by the evidence he collected. However, I simply must, in the interests of truth and fair play, gently correct any impression given by Mr. Bokenham that one of my sentences is "ridiculous". Our Chairman clearly does think it absurd that Robertson scorned the ciphers on offer in his day, but my sentence simply reports that Robertson did so. As an accurate statement of fact, such reporting can hardly be ridiculous.

Yours,

ARTHUR M. CHALLINOR
1. To encourage, for the benefit of the public, the study of works of Francis Bacon as a philosopher, statesman and poet; also his character, genius and life, his influence on his own and succeeding times, and the tendencies and results of his writing.

2. To encourage for the benefit of the public, the general study of the evidence in favour of Francis Bacon’s authorship of the plays commonly ascribed to Shakespeare, and to investigate his connection with other works of the Elizabethan period.

OFFICERS AND COUNCIL

Hon. Vice-President
Miss Mary Brameld

Council:

Chairman
Mr. T. D. Bokenham

Dr. John S. Alabaster (resigned, 14 July, 1999)
Mr. Francis Carr
Mr. Gerald Salway (Secretary & Treasurer)
Prof. John Spiers (Librarian)
Mr. Peter Welsford (Editor & Chairman-designate)

MEMBERSHIP

The membership fee is £7.50 per annum payable on election to the Society. Subscriptions, enquiries and general correspondence should be addressed to Mr. Gerald Salway, Flat 1, Lee House, 75A Effra Road, London, SW19 8PS.

SUBMISSION OF MANUSCRIPTS
Manuscripts for submission for publication in Baconiana should be sent to: Mr. Peter Welsford, 34 Hartslock Court, Shooters Hill, Pangbourne, Berks, RG8 7BJ.